British Rush Cruisers, Men To Civil War In Palestine

30 Dead, 100 Hurt In Day of Rioting

Jewish Leaders Urge People Not to Be Drawn Into Fight.

By Joseph Driscoll.
Special Cable to The Post.

London, July 7.—With a grave civil war developing in Palestine between Arabs and Jews to the detriment of British prestige and interests, the British government has replied by dispatching two of its best warships to that mandated territory.

The admiralty confirmed tonight that the 32,000-ton battle cruiser Repulse has been ordered to Haifa, the principal port of Palestine, where she is due to arrive tomorrow. The Repulse arrived a week ago at Corfu.

The cruiser Emerald, 7,550 tons, arrived tonight at Haifa, having been diverted via the Suez Canal. Orders were radioed to the Emerald to reach Haifa as soon as possible. The Emerald belongs to the fourth cruiser squadron normally stationed in the East Indies. She was homeward bound and was due at Malta next Sunday. It is understood she is carrying troops who will be landed to preserve order.

The British are sending a further brigade of troops to Palestine in the early autumn to reinforce the troop brigades already there.

Thirty Arabs and Jews have been slain in Palestine in the last 24 hours and more than 100 have been wounded. The military are standing by in Jerusalem and martial law may be declared.

Jerusalem, July 7 (AP).—Arab tribes from across the Jordan were reported massed on the Palestine frontier tonight as Britain sped warships and troops to smash the bloodiest Jewish-Arab race outbreak in the Holy Land's recent history.

Simultaneously, Jewish leaders warned their people against being "drawn into civil war."

In a pitched battle lasting four hours, British troops fought a band of 600 Arabs said to have just crossed the border from Transjordania, east of Palestine and a part of Britain's Palestine mandate, but governed by a local Arab administration.

Five Arabs were reported killed and eight wounded. There were no British casualties.

Total casualties in two days of rioting and battling were 33 killed, 11 wounded.

The tribesmen were said to be

Attorney Seeks Governor's Post Because It's Soft

Princess Anne, Md., July 7 (AP).—F. Kirk Maddrix, State's attorney for Somerset County, announced today he will file next week as a candidate for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, not because he thinks he is qualified, but just because he thinks being Governor would be swell.

The real reason he wants to be chief executive, he said in a lengthy statement, is "because once I went through the Government House at Annapolis and was so favorably impressed with it that I would like very much to live there, and I would like to ride in an expensive limousine with a police cordon as an escort and to take my friends on cocktail parties aboard the palatial State yacht, Dupont. That would be just ducky."

Army Weighs Purge of Elders To Give Young Officers Room

Gen. Gassner Hints Those Reaching Fixed Age Will Be Retired.

A purge of some of the seniors of the 12,600 Army officers to make room for younger men is under consideration by the War Department, Brig. Gen. Lorenzo D. Gasser, a member of the high command, disclosed today.

A current investigation tends to show that retirement of officers reaching fixed ages in any particular grade would be the fairest thing, he said, adding that a revision of the promotion system is being prepared for presentation to Congress.

Gen. Gasser said, "There must be forced attrition. That is clear. We are increasing the officer strength and officers coming in at the bottom are promoted at a stated interval up to captain, with stagnation thereafter. In our study we have considered all possible ways of increasing elimination in the field grades and the institution of an age-in-grade forced retirement provision appears to be the only way.

"We have not eliminated the possibility of selection altogether, but it looks as though we will propose a retirement law with fixed retirement ages," he told the Army and

Britain Asks Franco Clarify His Good Will

Special Cable to The Post.

London, July 7.—The British government has asked Gen. Franco to explain the exact meaning he attaches to his recent disclaimer of intentions to make deliberate attacks upon British ships in Spanish waters, Prime Minister Chamberlain announced today in the House of Commons.

Chamberlain said his government holds the "deliberate bombing and sinking of merchant ships has never been permitted by international law, still less the machine gunning of their bridges and decks."

Gen. Franco, replying to the British protests over the bombing of British ships, had disclaimed any idea of singling out this nation for attacks in such fashion.

The possibility of breaking off the quasi-diplomatic relations with Franco's government was hinted at by the Prime Minister when he said Sir Robert Hodgson, British agent assigned to Burgos, was remaining in England for the present—"certainly until a reply was received from the Burgos authorities."

Pressed by laborites to make it clear his government would accept no arrangement which would involve by implication the legitimacy of blockade by air, Chamberlain answered:

"I have already said that I would not admit that."

About Franco's suggestion that British shipping with government Spain should be restricted to Almeria, which Franco would guarantee safe from his bombers, Chamberlain said there were difficulties in facilities for unloading cargoes, and in communications with the rest of Spain. Chamberlain said he was consulting British ship owners who, on their own initiative, already have rejected Franco's novel idea.

Cardozo Condition Unchanged 2 Days

New York, July 7 (AP).—The condition of Justice Benjamin Cardozo of the United States Supreme Court, has remained unchanged for the past two days, his secretary, Joseph Rauh, announced tonight.

The justice, suffering from a heart ailment, is at the home of State Supreme Court Justice Irving Lehman, where he is kept almost constantly under an oxygen tent.

U. S. Marines Halt Japanese At Shanghai

Gendarmes Barred From Settlement as 1,000 Are Seized.

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Friday), July 8.—United States Marines halted Japanese gendarmes early today after 18 hours of Chinese terrorist activities in the International Settlement during which more than 1,000 Chinese were seized by police and international forces.

The Marines acted when two motor trucks filled with Japanese military police and civilian recruits attempted to enter their defense sector in the Anglo-American area of the settlement to search for Chinese nationalist bombers who had been terrorizing the Japanese Hongkew section of the settlement.

The Marines stopped the trucks as they crossed the American boundary and forced the drivers to turn and recross Yuyaching road where the Japanese remained silently for haf an hour before driving back into Hongkew.

Order Restored.

Order was being restored gradually in the foreign areas of Shanghai at 2 a. m. and some bridges across Soochow Creek, the boundary between the Anglo-American and Japanese sections, were being reopened to pubic traffic.

The violence grew out of a Chinese threat that anti-Japanese terrorists would attempt mass attacks on Shanghai yesterday—the first anniversary of the Chinese-Japanese war.

Grenades and bombs were exploded throughout the day and much of the foreign areas of the city was thrown into confusion. At least eight Japanese and several Chinese were killed.

Many Chinese, and one British soldier were injured.

Japanese Spread Out.

Meantime the war entered its second year with Japanese and Chinese still locked in a great battle southeast of China's provisional capital in Hankow.

Japanese were spreading out from the city of Hukow, dominating the entrance to strategic Lake Poyang, and had gained a foothold in Kiukiang, the sister city of Hukow.

To the north they intensified their drive in south Shansi Province but were meeting strong Chinese resistance while in the south they were repulsed in a new effort at landings near Swatow.

In Hankow Gen. Chiang Kai-shek issued a new appeal to the Chinese people to resist to the last.

Police Study Mystery Death Of Horlick Heiress in Canada

Toronto, July 7 (Canadian Press). A police inquiry was launched today into the death here of Mrs. Maybelle Horlick Sidley, 51, Chicago divorcee and heiress to the Horlick malted milk fortune.

Mrs. Sidley died yesterday at the residence of W. Perkins Bull, Toronto lawyer and a friend of the Horlick family for many years.

A suggestion that Chief Constable D. C. Draper institute the inquiry came from Attorney General Gordon Conant of Ontario. His explanation was, "The atmosphere of the case puts it on inquiry."

A private autopsy conducted yesterday by Prof. W. L. Robinson, Dr. G. W. Lougheed and Dr. Eric Linell, all of the Banting Institute, disclosed the immediate cause of death was edema of the brain, resulting from a lesion of the spinal cord, Dr. Robinson said. He stated death was due to natural causes. He added Dr. Linell would make another examination of the brain within a week or ten days.

The autopsy was performed with the permission of Mrs. Sidley's son, William, who came from Chicago last week when notified that his mother was seriously ill. She was the only daughter of William Horlick, whose estate was estimated at between $15,000,000 and $20,000,000 when he died about a year ago.

Mrs. Sidley and two brothers, who live in Racine, Wis., shared equally in the estate. Her body was sent to Racine today.

Hunt Begun For Data on Monopolies

Investigations Won't Be 'Punitive,' O'Mahoney Emphasizes.

By Robert C. Albright.

A far-flung search for monopoly evidence by six Federal agencies, backed by the power of subpena, yesterday was authorized by the joint legislative-executive monopoly investigating committee.

The go-ahead signal was given with the full assent of the 12-man group of Senators, Representatives and agents of the six Federal bureaus.

A three-member subcommittee was appointed by Chairman Joseph C. O'Mahoney to clear all subpenas asked by the agencies for corporate data needed in their studies. O'Mahoney said for the time being they will be "subpenas for information" and not to produce witnesses.

"There is no desire here and no intention here to reveal violations of law," said O'Mahoney.

Won't Pillory Industry.

"The committee is as an absolute unit in its desire to conduct a purely objective study and not a punitive investigation. We do not intend to pillory any industry or any group. We want to draw a broad picture of how America's economic machine operates and what it's all about."

The joint committee was adjourned indefinitely, subject to the call of the chair. Meanwhile, the chairman will name there sets of sub-committees to carry on its functions. First, he will appoint one member of Congress to work with each of the executive agencies. Second, he will name an executive committee to direct the course of the study, while the main group is not sitting.

O'Mahoney, as chairman, or Representative Sumners, of Texas, as vice chairman, will sit with Chairman Douglas of the Securities and Exchange Commission, and Representative Eicher, of Iowa, on another sub-committee to pass on all subpenas issued.

Fields of Study Fixed.

The joint committee in an all-day session outlined the field in which each agency will operate and directed each one to proceed at once in its field to gather all material relevant to the study. Each agency will reduce the scope of its phase of the inquiry to writing, and the committee's "co-ordinator," Leon Henderson, will strive to prevent overlappings.

But O'Mahoney conceded it was possible more than one agency may investigate the same industry, if its functions take them into it. He denies that steel, cement, rubber, oil or other industries "formally" figured in yesterday's conversations.

"We are dealing with the functional aspects, rather than the specific," said the committee chairman. "The

Virginian, Missing 10 Days, Returns; Drugged, Robbed

Hopewell, Va., July 7 (AP).—The experience of being "drugged" and robbed in San Francisco and then left to wander for days in a "dazed condition" was recounted by Charles T. Peters, 52, upon his return here today after being reported missing since June 27.

Peters, Kiwanis Cub president and prominent merchant here, said he was given a drug and robbed of $183 after entering what he thought was a "courtesy" car operating during the Kiwanis International convention. He said he drank some coffee with the occupants of the machine and knew nothing more until that night when he found himself in Pasadena.

After wandering around for several days, he said, he made his way back to San Francisco and left for home, July 1.

Debs at Court Lose Peek-a-Boo Effects

London, July 7 (AP).—Flustered debutantes appeared at tonight's court presentation with modest additions to low-cut gowns which court circles had hinted were too peek-a-boo. Unable to arrange for new costumes in a limited time, seven debutantes fell back on scarfs and draped them around their shoulders when curtsying before the King.

Last night society buds wore the year's lowest in necklines and daring bodice effects, and gossips predicted the Earl of Clarendon, the lord chamberlain, would do something about it.

Roosevelt Slaps at Party Aides As He Leaves to Aid 'Liberals;' Fills Maritime, Air Safety Jobs

Sea Labor Board Headed by Bruere

Administrator of Wage Act May Be Picked During Trip.

President Roosevelt, before leaving for the West, made 19 major Federal appointments yesterday, but delayed naming a wages and hours administrator.

Edward J. Noble, of Greenwich, Conn., wealthy manufacturer of a candy called "Life Savers" and an aviation enthusiast, was named chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, which Congress recently created to co-ordinate and administer all American aviation policies. He is regarded as a liberal Republican.

Others named to the CAA were Harllee Branch, of Georgia, Second Assistant Postmaster General in charge of air mail; G. Grant Mason, of this city, in charge of Pan American Airways' Latin-American Division; Robert Hinckley, of Utah, in charge of Works Progress Administration activities for Far Western States, and Oswald Ryan, of Anderson, Indiana, general counsel of the Federal Power Commission.

Jobs Pay $12,000.

The jobs pay $12,000 a year and the appointments are for six years.

President Roosevelt also announced the appointment of Clinton M. Hester, young Treasury attorney, as Civil Aeronautics Administrator. He played a prominent role in drafting the new legislation. Like members of the authority, he will receive $12,000 a year.

Thomas O. Hardin, of Texas, and Sumpter Smith, of Alabama, were appointed to the authority's Air Safety Board, which will investigate accidents and develop means to avoid them. They will receive $7,500 annually. A third member will be appointed later.

Earlier in the day President Roosevelt appointed three landsmen to the new Maritime Labor Board, which was created in the closing days of Congress to mediate maritime disputes and formulate a "permanent" policy by March 1, 1940.

Bruere Is Chairman.

Robert Walter Bruere, author and educator of New York, was named chairman. The other two named were Dr. Louis Bloch, of California, now labor adviser to the United States Maritime Commission, and Claude E. Seehorn, of Denver, Colo., vice president of the Brotherhood

Texas Air Line To Haul Mail Free For Government

Mail on a new Texas airplane route, to be opened shortly, will be carried without cost to the Government.

Bids on the line from Houston to Brownsville, via Corpus Christi and from Houston to San Antonio were opened June 18. Eastern Air Lines was awarded the contract on its offer to carry the mail for "zero cents per airplane mile." Braniff Airways, which bid .00001907378 cents per airplane mile, protested the award on the ground that the Government may not accept voluntary and gratuitous service.

In an opinion yesterday, W. E. Kelly, acting solicitor of the Postoffice Department, declared that "a bid of free service may legally be accepted and that the bid of Eastern Air Lines is not defective on the ground that it might be construed as an offer of 'voluntary service.' Nor could the bid logically be regarded as such an offer nor the bidder be said to be a volunteer."

New Clews Hinted In Abdell Slaying

Norfolk, Va., July 7 (AP).—Ivor A. Page, jr., a member of the defense counsel for James C. Abdell, 41, convicted of murdering his 38-year-old wife, indicated today he would use newly discovered evidence as the basis of his plea for a new trial for Abdell.

Abdell was convicted last week and his punishment recommended as death in the electric chair by the jury.

Business Tax Rules Issued By D.C. Heads

Out-of-Town Firms Given a Formula by Which to Compute Levy.

The District Commissioners yesterday approved of regulations amplifying the business privilege tax provisions dealing with out-of-town firms.

The regulations offer a formula for computing the tax an out-of-town business must pay for doing business here.

The outside firms must report their entire local gross receipts as a basis for computing the tax. The application must present a "breakdown" showing the percentages representing selling expenses, cost of goods, and manufacturing or processing costs.

Issue Raised Last Year.

Last year the question arose whether Maryland firms doing business in the District should be required to file a return. Assistant Corporation Counsel Glenn Simmon drew up amendments to the tax on the privilege of doing business.

The amendments follow:

Persons having no office or place of business in the District, but who engage in business through an employe, agent or representative who solicits business here are now required to report the entire gross receipts from business resulting from such solicitation.

Persons whose gross receipts are derived from sources both from within and without the District may make application to the assessor for apportionment of such receipts, and upon consideration of such application there shall be allocated to the District a portion of such gross receipts representing that part of the business transacted within the District.

Persons having no office or place of business in the District who obtain no business as the result of solicitation in the District by an employe, and whose sole commercial activity with respect to business in the District is the delivery of goods here in their own equipment or on C. O. D. orders, shall report the entire gross receipts derived from the sale of goods delivered, and there shall be allocated to the District and the tax shall be

Utility Makes Sole Gains in Capital Area

North American Reports Steady Increase Here in Use of Power.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, July 7.—While their business in other parts of the country has been adversely affected by depressed industrial activity, subsidiaries of the North American Co. have experienced steady gains this year in the Washington, D. C., area, James F. Fogarty, president, announced today.

While subsidiaries operating in St. Louis, Cleveland and Milwaukee areas suffered from reduced industrial consumption in the first half of this year, he said, subsidiaries in the Capital area, representing about one-seventh of the aggregate output of the system, have not been similarly affected, and their output has shown an increase each week in the first half of 1938.

Combined, the four groups of North American subsidiaries showed an output of 2,934,000,000 kilowatt hours for the six months ended June 30, a decrease of 8.80 per cent compared with the all-peak record of 3,217,000,000 kilowatt hours established in the like 1937 period.

Residential use of electric service continues to show an increase in territories of all North American subsidiaries, Fogarty pointed out.

Flight From Death Takes Boy Into It

Taken to Franconia, Va., less than three weeks ago because his family feared Alexandria's traffic, Kenneth Meade, 7, was killed yesterday by an automobile in front of his home.

He rode his scooter down the front driveway, across the sidewalk and into the path of a machine driven by George Steve, 32, of Franconia. After witneses told police the child appeared too suddenly for the driver to avoid him, Steve was not held.

Kenneth was rushed by his father, Clarence Meade, to Alexandria Hospital, where he died. He suffered a fractured skull and fractures of both legs.

14 Boys Are Burned to Death As 'Tenants' in Fire Practice

By the Associated Press

Lisbon, Portugal, July 7.—Fourteen boys died today in Coimbra when a gasoline-soaked building was set ablaze for a fire-fighting exhibition, planned as a feature of the Holy Queen Festival.

Six other boys were in a hospital with serious injuries. Many persons were injured among stampeding spectators.

Two fire brigade officials were arrested. The government ordered an inquiry into the organization and execution of the display.

The boys, many of them sons of firemen, were hired for ten escudos (45 cents) to play the parts of tenants in the four-story wooden structure.

The fire brigade was stationed at headquarters 400 yards away when the building was set afire.

The blaze swept swiftly through the flimsy structure and panic-stricken spectators hindered the fire fighters striving to reach the victims.

Two boys perished in the flames. Eight were killed jumping from windows. The other victims died later in the hospital.

President Will Assist Campaign Against Senator George.

Slights Byrd, Glass In Naming Judge

By William V. Nessly.

President Roosevelt yesterday delivered three distinct and emphatic blows at high members of his party whom he considers not entirely in sympathy with his program, then departed on a transcontinental tour on behalf of Democratic primary candidates whom he classes as "liberals."

The trip will take him from coast to coast in a zigzag course, permitting him to play an active part in campaign contests in which some of his most enthusiastic Senatorial backers find themselves opposed.

In Belligerent Mood.

In a belligerent mood on his final day in Washington before his departure, Mr. Roosevelt took these steps that revealed the aggressive frame of mind in which he begins the tour:

He made arrangements with Lawrence B. Camp and other Georgians to deliver an address in that State in the midst of Camp's campaign, with New Deal backing, to unseat Senator Walter F. George, who helped to kill the President's court reorganization program.

He completely passed over recommendations of the two Virginia Senators, Carter Glass and Harry F. Byrd, who often have been determinedly against Presidential policies, in appointing to a Virginia Federal judgeship Judge Floyd H. Roberts, candidate of Representative John W. Flannagan, jr., an ardent New Dealer.

He appointed as United States attorney for the District of Nevada, William S. Boyle, stanch opponent of Senator Pat McCarran, another court bill foe. It is reported that Senator McCarran and Boyle have not spoken for two years.

Won't Pull Punches.

These acts of defiance for Democrats who have not always gone along with him in his legislative endeavors indicated the President intended to pull no punches in the political warfare on which he is embarking.

Sayre Defends Trade Pacts at U. Va. Institute

By Hedley Donovan.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charlottesville, Va., July 7.—Francis B. Sayre, Assistant Secretary of State, tonight defended the Administration's program of reciprocal trade agreements as a powerful stimulus to prosperity and an instrument for "building secure foundations for peace."

"Men will fight before they starve," he warned in an address before the Institute of Public Affairs. "Uneconomic trade barriers forge the thunderbolts of war."

Speaking on the same program, James H. R. Cromwell, economist, author and husband of the former Doris Duke, attacked the social security act as falling far short of providing "the kind of security and independence in old age which public opinion demands and a prosperous America could afford."

No scheme of social security will work without "sustained recovery," he asserted, and prosperity can come only through Federal regulation of the flow of money and cessation of Government management in the field of production.

Cover 40 Per Cent of Trade.

Sayre told the audience of 800 in McIntyre Amphitheatre that reciprocal agreements now cover approximately 40 per cent of America's foreign trade and on completion of negotiations with Canada and Great Britain will affect a total of 60 per cent. American exports have nearly doubled during the four-year period the trade agreement policy has been in effect, he said.

The most favored nation principle, applied to the trade agreements program, has affected only $30,000,000 of American imports, while "it safeguarded and benefited ta least $265,000,000 worth of American exports," he pointed out, describing the arrangement as "a nine to one bargain in our favor."

Any exclusive preference would constitute discrimination against all other nations, Sayre stated. "That is the policy leading to retaliation, to mounting trade barriers and to increasing economic conflict. It sets the stage for war."

Trade agreements are the most promising approaches to reviving international trade, he contended, because "to throw open the tariff at this time to sweeping Congressional revision would be to give full play to narrow sectional interests rather than to great national ones."

The State Department official deplored the fact that the trade agreement program "has been made a battle ground for politics," adding that the policy "was not conceived as a Democratic measure nor as a Republican measure."

Cromwell declared that the investment or reserve method employed by private insurance companies is impractical as a basis for a national old age security plan, advocating the "pay as you go" principle which would use Treasury funds. Terming the present plan "contradictory," he claimed that "if unemployment insurance should become operative because of a serious depression, old age security would then become largely inoperative because of that depression."

Money Control Urged.

The Nation's obligation to the needy age dand unemployed is now undisputed, Cromwell maintained, but the solution to the problem lies with control over "the economic forces which precipitate these tragic paradoxes of want in the midst of plenty" rather than inadequate doles to the unfortunate.

Conceding that he knew no "panacea," the speaker argued that "many of the symptoms of a sick economic system come from the way money is used or abused, whether it is expanded or contracted, whether it is made to work or allowed to loaf."

The flow of money, he concluded, must be synchronized with the flow of finished consumer goods so that purchasing power can always keep pace with production.

At an institute round table in the afternoon members of the audience and panel cross-examined for an hour Dr. Giuseppe Ugo Papi, of the University of Rome, who had spoken earlier in the day on Italian political and economic policy.

Dr. Papi, who pleaded that tariff barriers erected by creditor nations force debtor nations to seek access to raw materials elsewhere, defended the conquest of Ethiopia as "an urgent necessity brought about by the unreasonable policy of the more wealthy nations."

Dr. Frank Kingdon, president of the University of Newark, said Italian policy stems from "a philosophy of crisis in a country of definitely limited resources." He added that the United States, with an economy of comparative abundance, gives men the right to live as they like, "while Italy gives them the right to die as they like."

In reply Dr. Papi contended that in America "a situation of constant instability," prevails, referring to "your masses of unemployed living on public funds." Italy, he implied, knows no such instability, because it has established "an equilibrium between the aims of the state and the aims of the individual."

Working for Washington

Mrs. Ottenberg Leads Drive Of District Women for Vote

MRS. LOUIS OTTENBERG.

League President Also Interested in Obtaining Autonomy School Board Once Enjoyed; Pioneer Suffrage Worker.

By Christine Sadler

After organizing eight political centers in New York City and campaigning for woman suffrage all over New York State, Mrs. Louis Ottenberg married and came to Washington in time to join the most spectacular suffragist pageant of all—that before the White House in the Wilson administration. Although several of her companions were jailed, the pageant (picketing, some called it) was a big success. Women got the vote.

But not Mrs. Ottenberg, nor numerous other suffrage veterans living in the Nation's capital, and caught by the "exclusive jurisdiction" clause which makes Congress the one and only local lawmaker.

Undaunted, the group organized the Voteless District of Columbia League of Women Voters and kept on working. Made up of some of the keenest-minded professional women in the country, the Voteless League still hopes for the ballot.

Measuring Gains.

Nationally, they are measuring the gains their program made as a result of the executive order extending civil service, because of the wage and hour bill with its child labor provisions and because of improved food and drug provisions.

For the approaching year they have mapped out a set of imposing objectives. Most of all, Mr. Ottenberg says, they are immediately concerned with giving back to the board of education the autonomy it enjoyed in 1906.

"Our school system in Washington is so handicapped by red tape and earmarked provisions that it cannot move a peg in the right direction," Mrs. Ottenberg declares.

Secondly, the league is interested in establishment of a local department of labor to administer the minimum wage law for women in the District and the 8-hour law. Thirdly, it will continue its work in behalf of adequate appropriations for relief, child welfare, and education.

Mrs. Ottenberg is the league's eleventh president.

Wife of An Attorney.

She never has felt, as do some women, that protective legislation for women stands in the way of "equal rights." "I don't feel that women have been handicapped by it, and I would like to see the same protection extended to men," she says. "But I'd hate to think women were working just for women. We feel that our work is for the good of the country as a whole. When we worked for the ballot we urged that we could become good citizens. I think we have proved that we can and that we can work in a non-partisan way for legislation that will benefit the group as a whole."

Mrs. Ottenberg is the wife of a well-known Washington attorney, who also is a civic leader.

She is the mother of two daughters, one a social welfare worker and the other a Washington newspaperwoman, and of a son, a university student.

On Monday—Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Ufford, veteran welfare leaders, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

Ickes Denies PWA Attack on San Francisco

Funds Not Withheld Because of Power Suit, Secretary Avers.

Secretary Ickes and Mayor Angelo J. Rossi, of San Francisco, dealt blows at each other yesterday on the apparent choice presented to the West Coast city of being forced into a public power distribution system or risking indefinite delay of $100,000,000 of PWA projects requested by the city.

Mayor Rossi intimated that Secretary Ickes was trying to prevent the city from appealing a decision of a Federal district court in California. Ickes retorted that the mayor was making unwarranted implications. Ickes said he was not threatening to withhold PWA funds from the city as a means of retaliation; all he was doing was deferring action until he understood the financial obligations of the city including the matter of whether it was going to obey the district court by setting up a power system.

Power Sale Barred.

This meant that not a single PWA allotment has yet gone to San Francisco out of the new funds and that Ickes was still asking whether Mayor Rossi sincerely intended establishing a municipal power setup.

The city generates power at the Hetch Hetchy reservoir, using lands donated by the Federal Government. Under the Raker Act of 1913 the city is not allowed to sell the power thus developed to a private company, but in fact the city, being without a retail distribution system, has had a private utility, the Pacific Gas and Electric Co., distribute the power under a so-called agency contract, with the city sharing the profits.

Secretary Ickes sued the city and the District Federal Court in May upheld his contention that the city for years had been violating the Raker act. However, the city population has rejected in popular referendums various bond issue proposals to buy out the private company and establish a municipal distribution system.

Claims Right to Appeal.

Rossi wired Ickes that he was filing numerous PWA project proposals and that the city had ample money to finance its share. He said he refused to relinquish the right to appeal the Hetch-Hetchy decision. He indicated he was not going to submit a new request for PWA power system funds, but he did say that the people in the November election would again have a chance to vote on a chapter amendment to buy out the private utility.

Ickes sent Rossi this telegram:

"From your telegram and various public statements it seems that unwarranted implications have been placed on my former telegram. Do I understand from your telegram that you are not submitting as a part of San Francisco's current public works program any proposal for distribution of Hetch-Hetchy power in fulfillment of the city's legal and moral obligations under the Baker act?"

Bell Sets Up Permanent Staff of Budget Experts to Combat Waste.

Acting Budget Director Daniel W. Bell disclosed yesterday he was setting up a permanent staff of efficiency experts to comb the Goverment service for waste.

He obtained from Congress a $130,000 boost in the Budget Bureau appropriation to hire about 55 persons for the work. Some of them will be employed here, but Bell also expects to set up about five regional offices, he told the Associated Press.

The efficiency experts, he emphasized, will keep a special eye out for duplication of work by different departments, but their work will not be connected with the Administration's legislative program for Government reorganization.

Chairman Sheppard (Democrat), Texas, said today the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee may subpoena any candidate who fails to answer nine questions in a questionnaire completed yesterday.

The questions are designed to determine, among other things, whether public or private funds are used to swing elections. The questionnaires will be mailed to Senate candidates.

The committee stated:

"In order that it may obey the mandate given it by the Senate, this committee will receive and consider any charge that may be filed with it, under oath, to the effect that funds appropriated by the Congress have been or are being used to intimidate or coerce any votes cast or about to be cast in the Senatorial campaigns of 1938, or any charge coming within the scope of the committee's jurisdiction."

Nathan Straus, administrator of the U. S. Housing Authority, is to leave New York July 19 on a cross country speaking tour of 14 cities where housing projects are underway.

The tentative route, he said, included stops at cities in the northern half of the Nation, terminating in Los Angeles. Definite itinerary will be announced in a few days. He said he would leave Los Angeles August 5 with his family for a vacation in Hawaii.

Secretary Ickes said he would announce, "probably in a day or two," PWA's policy in making allotments for public power projects.

A drive in Congress to prevent use of PWA funds for projects designed to compete with existing private power facilities collapsed last month when Senate Majority Leader Barkley (Democrat), Kentucky, said the President did not intend to approve any PWA allocation for a public power project until the existing private power company involved had failed to accept a "fair and reasonable" offer to buy its facilities.

Several power project applications have been held up pending preparation of a formula by which PWA will determine what constitutes a "fair and reasonable" offer.

Connery Charges Radio Firm With Corruption and Fraud

By the Associated Press.

Representative Connery (Democrat), Massachusetts, said yesterday there is evidence that the Radio Corporation of America, "or those officially acting for it, corrupted elected Representatives, debauched judicial officials and looted and defrauded their own stockholders."

Connery, in a statement printed in the last issue of the Congressional Record, published yesterday, also said R. C. A. "or those acting for it" paid "some $28,000,000 in dividends to preferred stockholders when their total earnings were less than $12,000,000."

Demands Investigation.

He added that the Columbia Broadcasting Co. "listed its securities on the New York Stock Exchange at a presumed value of $60,000,000 when the Securities and Exchange Commission showed the total cash investment of those who originally held these securities was less than $1,600,000."

Demanding an investigation of what he termed the "radio monopoly," Connery accused unnamed members of the Federal Communications Commission of fostering monopoly.

He also said:

"An investigation of the radio monopoly will show wherein two of the commissioners, who, by their official acts, made the present monopoly possible, on leaving the commission were presented with a vice presidency of the Columbia Broadcasting Co.; that a present high executive of one of the radio chains secured his position and draws a princely salary each year because of his ability to influence a Washington banker to advance several thousands of dollars to an official of a governmental agency, in charge of regulating radio, to equip radio stations, which he held with others, contrary to law.

Connery Praises Payne.

Connery did not name the officials.

Connery praised George Henry Payne, who is a minority member of the Communications Commission and who has deplored what he called "abuses" in the radio field.

Payne, Connery added, "was frank and fearless despite endeavors to enmesh him in the chicanery of police court examination."

Connery described Chairman Frank R. McNinch, of the commission as dancing "to the music of the radio pied pipers as he did in 1928 when he deserted the Democratic Party to support President Hoover."

Venezuela Maps Three-Year Program

Most important item of Venezuela's three-year plan recently presented by President Lopez Contreras will be an elaborate sanitation and public health program it was announced yesterday in a publication of the Pan American Union here.

Waterworks for more than 100 cities and sewers for about 15 cities are included in the plan which proposes the establishment of numerous health centers throughout the country. Improvement of low-cost housing and a national health institute which will manufacture serums, vaccines and biological products, is also planned.

Citing Venezuela's greatest public needs as an increased national production, lower cost of housing and improvements in "the inseparable trilogy of sanitation education and population," the Pan American Union bulletin said President Contreras proposes to lay the most stress on his health program.

Rescue Party To Hunt 6 Lost Riding Rapids

River Expert Fears for Safety of Colorado River Expedition.

By the Associated Press.

Lees Ferry, Ariz., July 7.—A Princeton University professor and a student, with the help of a veteran river rider, are going out to search the Colorado River for the overdue Nevills expedition.

The three "rescuers," who said their trip primarily would be "just for pleasure," are Prof. L. F. H. Lowe and Harold Hartshorne, jr., and Dave Rust, guide. They will push two boats into the dangerous river at Hite, Utah, just below Cataract Canyon. They set out from Richfield, Utah, to seek some trace of Norman D. Nevills and the two women and three men of his party en route to Lees Ferry.

Meanwhile, today H. (Buzz) Holmstrom, 29, who last year conquered the river alone, said at Boulder City, Nev., he was "honestly worried" about the Nevills expedition.

Isolated Section.

Holmstrom made the 300 miles from Green River, Utah, to Lees Ferry in ten days. The Nevills party started from Green River 18 days ago, and was scheduled to reach here July 4.

Cataract Canyon is the most isolated and inaccessible part of the United States," Holmstrom said. "If they lost their boats and were not drowned and were able to climb to the rim of the canyon, their chances of getting out safely still would be almost negligible.

"The Dirty Devil River marks the end of Cataract Canyon, and it actually is so filthy it smells bad. But it is the beginning of 160 miles of camparatively easy going."

Full of Rapids.

It is this strip below Cataract Canyon the Rust party plans to search.

"That is probably the most beautiful part of the Colorado River and if one is careful there is little danger," said Rust. "It contains Glen Canyon, which is full of rapids, but not comparable with Cataract Canyon for dangers.

At Grand Canyon, Ariz., Emery C. Kolb, photographer and veteran of two trips down the river, said the National Parks Service had picked up a short wave message from an unidentified amateur radio operator who said the Nevill's party had passed Cataract Canyon.

New Orleans C.I.O. Raided by Police

New Orleans, July 7 (AP).—Police raided headquarters of the Committee for Industrial Organization again today and arrested about 80 persons.

A court order today restrained C. I. O. pickets from interfering with American Federation of Labor truck drivers in a strike called by the C. I. O. Police are riding as bodyguards to both truck and cab drivers.

Brother Gives Haugwitz Cold Shoulder Also

By the United Press.

London, July 7.—The marital difficulties of Danish Count Court Haugwitz-Reventlow have resulted in sharp differences between the count and his elder brother, Count Heinrich, it was learned tonight.

Their relations have been cool for months, it was said, and the count's rift with Barbara Hutton has put them even farther apart.

Quarters close to the Haugwitz-Reventlow brothers said they now were not speaking. The present rift was said to be the third since Count Court married the American heiress.

Count Court, who returned to London from Paris to answer in court charges that he threatened his wife and demanded $5,000,000 and the custody of their 2-year-old son, Lance, as the price of separation, did not register, as was his custom, at the Dorchester Hotel where Count Heinrich is staying. Instead he took up residence at the Ritz in a different section of Mayfair.

Heinrich is the heir to the Haugwitz-Reventlow property in Denmark and Upper Silesia and a hereditary trust fund of about $800,000.

Meanwhile Count Court and Countess Barbara remained in seclusion, the former at his hotel and the latter at her residence, Winfield House, in Regent's Park.

Prince Frederick of Prussia remained conveniently out of town since it was said he was the London society man named anonymously in Tuesday's court hearing on the disputes between the Haugwitz-Reventlows. The 26-year-old grandson of former Kaiser Wilhelm is visiting friends at Cardiff, Wales.

Earl Nash Named Vice Chairman of Roll Call of 1938

Nash is vice chairman of the public relations committee of the Community Chest, chairman of the District of Columbia Chapter of the American Red Cross Public Relations Committee and a member of the Washington Board of Trade. He is a member of the board of trustees of the Community Chest.

The twenty-second Roll Call of the District Chapter of the Red Cross will be from September 26 to October 17. Goal is 75,00 members.

Posse Hunts Fugitive.

Grundy, Va., July 7 (AP)—A posse of Buchanan County farmers, armed with shotguns, was aiding officers of the State convict camp four miles north of Grundy this morning in the search for David Buner, 24, colored, of Roanoke, who escaped while doing work with a road crew near here.

The Long and Complex Annals Of the Rich Barbara Hutton

American Husbands Neglected Romance, Heiress Thought, So She Went for Titles; It May Be Headache, But No Bore.

Copyright, 1938, by the United Press.

New York, July 7.—Just before 20-year-old Barbara Hutton married Prince Alexis Mdivani, a thick-lipped, swarthy young man who knew the value of a title and a dollar, she said he was glad he was not an American, because she had observed American husbands neglected romance after the honey moon and devoted themselves mostly to business.

With Alexis it was polo ponies. Still married to the beautiful social registerite, Louise van Alen, Alexis pursued Barbara halfway around the world until, beneath a Siamese moon, she consented to marry him. Once married safely to $42,000,000, Alexis chucked romance for polo.

His wife gave him a string of ponies as a wedding gift, along with $1,000,000 and a guarantee of

PRINCE ALEXIS MDIVANI.

$50,000 a year pocket money. He devoted himself to polo quite as strenuously as, before his divorce from Miss Van Alen, he had devoted himself to Barbara. When Barbara was desperately ill in London—the result of losing 30 pounds too rapidly on a reducing diet—Mdivani spent most of his time on the polo fields. When she returned to the United States to visit friends he left her, going to India for polo. They were separated for months and there were rumors of impending divorce, but eventually Babs joined him in India.

Didn't Wed Plant, at Least.

Barbara's doting father, Franklyn Laws Hutton, still congratulating himself on having broken his daughter's romance with the Broadway Don Juan, Phil Plant, had been quite certain at first he could prevent her marriage to Mdivani.

Other representatives of broken-down nobility had laid siege to the five-and-ten girl's heart and Papa Hutton shooed them away without much opposition from Barbara. He expressed confidence he could do the same with Mdivani.

Some months later he was remarking philosophically, "Well, one can't choose one's relatives."

When a very young girl Barbara had met Alexis Mdivani at Newport and Palm Beach. He had gone to Cambridge with the Van Alen brothers, Jimmy and Sammy, and was a frequent guest at their Newport home, Wakehurst.

Mdivani married Louise van Alen at Newport in a quiet wedding, giving strength to gossip that her parents furiously opposed the match. They went immediately to live in Paris, where Barbara was forgetting about Phil Plant.

It was not long before Barbara and Prince Alexis were seen together. It was Paris in the spring of 1932, when the rest of the world was concerned with bread lines, doles, raging unemployment.

Prince Alexis was having his troubles, too. Miss Van Alen's father had made a hasty and angry trip to Paris to berate his son-in-law about extravagance. Alexis yawned the firery old man out of the house and went chasing off to Biarritz after Barbara.

Suddenly Barbara sailed home for the Christmas holidays. A few days later, November 29, Miss Van Alen obtained her divorce at The Hague, charging incompatibility. On November 30 Mdivani sailed for New York.

Things Happening in N. Y.

Some things were happening in New York which perturbed him greatly. Barbara telephoned him while he was in mid-ocean and told him she did not want to see him. She denied furiously that they were engaged. She threatened not to see him again.

Barbara had discovered her friends in New York did not accept Mdivani with the same grace as London or Paris. There was frank talk about fortune-hunters which no one in Europe had been so rude as to mention to her face. Friends of Miss Van Alen who considered Mdivani had squandered one wife's money while chasing another, treated Barbara coolly.

Papa Hutton was grimly pleased. For a time there was even talk that Barbara might marry a young American of social standing, but less than wealthy. The young American liked Barbara but told frieds firmly that under no circumstances would he marry a girl worth $40,000,000.

Barbara sailed for the Far East. Mdivani followed. Away from friends and family and under the rich spell of the Orient, she consented to marry the Georgian prince. Their engagement was announced in Bangkok.

Papa Hutton was indignant and unbelieving.

"The wish is father to the thought with the Mdivani family," he said. "They'd like very much to see Alexis married to my daughter, but I assure you there is not a word of truth in it."

Just before they were married in the Paris City Hall on June 16, 1933, Barbara said:

"I think Prince Mdivani will know how to help me spend my money."

Just a year after she came into her inheritance of $40,000,000 it was reported depleted by $13,000,000.

Ford Patents Car Engine on The Rear Axle

Unit Saddles Shaft; Previous Difficulties Overcome by Design.

Henry Ford has received a patent for an engine unit, sadding the automobile's rear axel, which, if manufactured and placed on the market, will be one of the most revolutionary developments in passenger car design in years.

The Patent Office yesterday revealed that patent No. 2,123,005 was granted to the Detroit magnate last Tuesday, providing for a V-8 engine mounted in the rear of the car in such a way that the driver can have an obstructed view of the road without any sacrifice of balance or operation efficiency.

The patent application was filed on May 13, 1937. At the top of the page showing the technical drawings is the name "H. Ford."

"The object of my invention," Ford said, "is to provide a motor vehicle wherein the engine, transmission, differential and axle reduction gearing are all formed as a unit at the rear of the car, so as to more directly transmit the drive from the engine to the driving wheels."

In recent years the rear-power system has been adopted for motor buses—hundreds of them are in operation here—but application to private cars has never been successfully attempted.

"In the past, Ford said, "considerable difficulty has been experienced with all driving units of like nature because of the difficulties in maintaining exact alignment between the various units comprising the assembly. It is extremely costly to machine the various parts so that the axis of the engine crankshaft is exactly aligned with the axis of the transmission and driving pinion."

The newly invented unit hurdles all mechanical obstacles, Ford claims, and "maintains a substantially equal distribution of weight on each side of the vehicle."

John A. Moyer, 77, retired caretaker, of 4324 Eighth street northwest, didn't know where "Dr. Roberts" lived when a man, two women and a child, riding in a dark sedan, asked directions of him at Varnum and Eighth streets yesterday noon.

But one of the women, described as "gypsy-looking," was so sorry to bother Mr. Moyer she insisted on "blessing him," patting various parts of his clothing.

Struck by a Washington-bound B. & O. passenger train within sight of his home, 5-year-old Julian Fate Jefferson was instantly killed yesterday at the Lincoln avenue crossing, 1 miles north of Rockville, Md.

The child, a resident of Westmore, and a younger brother were on the way to a store and paused at the unguarded grade crossing as a freight train went by. The noise of the freight is believed to have drowned out the sound of the passenger train approaching the other way.

The child was the second of Mrs. Bessie Jefferson's nine children to meet a violent death. Clyde was accidentally shot to death in 1928 at the age of 12 near Knoxville, Tenn.

The father died about three years ago. Last month their 9-year-old daughter, Jean, died of pneumonia.

Soldier Flees Treatment as Mental Case

Officers Say Man Ordered to Walter Reed Had 'Persecution Complex.'

A colored soldier from Fort Myer, who may be a dangerous mental case, was sought by military authorities and police last night, after he escaped from an ambulance which was bringing him to Walter Reed Hospital for observation.

The hunted man is Private Matthew Brandon, 23, of a Fort Myer machine gun company. On a previous visit to Walter Reed he was diagnosed as having a persecution complex. He has been in the Army for two years, and his home is in Scranton, Pa.

Brandon had been ordered back to Walter Reed for observation, and put in the ambulance with a patient suffering from tonsilitis. Corpl. William Robert Smith was in charge of the detail, and sat in the front seat.

At Wisconsin and M streets the ambulance stopped for a light, and Brandon leaped from the back and crawled into a moving cab. His escape was discovered a few minutes later.

Police, who said they had been informed the fugitive was extremely dangerous, stated he carried a black bag, bearing his luggage. Trains to Scranton were being watched.

Curtis Dall Wins Libel Suit Appeal Against Time, Inc.

Albany, N. Y., July 7 (AP).—The plea of Curtis B. Dall, former son-in-law of President Roosevelt, for a new trial in a $250,000 libel suit against Time Magazine, Inc., was granted today by the State court of appeals.

Dall claimed he was libeled in an article appearing in the April 23, 1934, issue of the magazine, which he said indicated he shot himself in the White House in the presence of his estranged wife, the present Anna Eleanor Boettiger, and Mrs Roosevelt.

Appended to the magazine article, however, was an explanation that the description of the shooting was imaginary and merely to show contrasting methods of news coverage.

agencies will start developing eyidence from this point of view of the broad economic structure, not from any personal point of view."

Evidence collected by the six agencies—the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Justice Department, the Treasury Department, the Federal Trade Commission, the Commerce Department and the Labor Department—will be held before the full committee after it is developed. Public hearings will not be held nor witnesses subpenaed, before September, O'Mahoney indicated.

Scope Is Broadened.

The scope of the investigation was substantially broadened when the committee unanimously authorized Henderson to confer with the heads of other Government departments "to see what suggestions they may have."

"Meanwhile, Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold charged the Justice Department's investigation of the spread between wholesale and retail price of milk and ice cream in Chicago indicated "conspiracies and agreements in restraint of trade" rather than any "accidental condition." A grand jury investigation today will inquire into the price spread.

The Federal Trade Commission recommended that Congress prohibit large corporations from purchasing the stock or assets of competing firms. The legislative proposal would not apply where a purchasing corporation controlled in the aggregate less than 10 per cent of the output of an entire industry. Effect of the law would be to prohibit a corporation from obtaining control of more than 10 per cent of the output of any industry.

The far-reaching nature of the joint committee's monopoly investigation was emphasized when Herman Oliphant, general counsel of the Treasury, asked and obtained permission for the Treasury to undertake a broad research study of antitrust laws here and abroad.

Treasury Has Personnel.

O'Mahoney said Oliphant wanted the Treasury to explore "the entire field of law covering business organizations." Asked why the Treasury should undertake such a study, Henderson said they felt they had the "personnel equipment for that work." O'Mahoney said it "was the personal suggestion of Mr. Oliphant."

The committee also decided to take advantage of the vast store of material collected by NRA in the Blue Eagle days of the early New Deal. The Commerce Department was authorized to delve in old NRA files now in its possession, for published and unpublished studies on trends, and data on the size of various industrial groups.

Data in possession of the Census Bureau and information collected by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce will also come under the Commerce Department study, directed by Assistant Secretary of Commerce Patterson.

For evidence of alleged identical bidding, the Treasury Department was directed to canvass experience with Government contracts and to study past bids on supplies purchased by the Treasury's procurement division.

SEC To Play Part.

Scope of the studies of the other four agencies, as tentatively outlined by O'Mahoney, is as follows:

Securities and Exchange Commission—Corporate powers and structures. (Chairman Douglas of the SEC also had indicated it would go into investment pools and large scale investments in capital and security markets. This would include insurance companies.)

Labor Department—Effects of combinations and price policies upon labor and unemployment and the effects of such policies upon working and living conditions in general.

Federal Trade Commission—Problems of production and distribution, including industrial combinations, mergers and price policies.

Justice Department—Industrial combinations and mergers on the one hand and price policies on the other.

The six agencies were authorized to make any investigation they saw fit within these broad outlines. Some of them, already endowed with powers of subpena, need not come to the sub-committee for authority to compel production of evidence.

Receiving newspapermen following the meeting, O'Mahoney repeatedly stressed the "unanimity and harmony" within the committee, emphasized that this was not a grudge hunt and admonished reporters they would do great harm if they wrote stories that "terrified business." He said the "broad, functional and objective" nature of the inquiry did not justify such a construction.

Policy to Be Formed.

Asked if the study will result in a definite Administration policy toward business, he said it should result in recommendations to Congress for a general policy to be adopted by Government toward business. He said this would not deal with legislation alone, but would probably outline a legislative course toward all business. O'Mahoney said he thought "the relation between small business and big business is a vital factor in the study."

At the morning session, O'Mahoney said the group considered only "housekeeping matters." Henderson, who will abandon his work as economist for the WPA to devote his full time to the monopoly committee as "executive secretary," was authorized to appoint an administrative assistant and a secretarial staff. He will establish a central office for the investigation, handle administrative details and machinery and keep constantly in touch with the various agencies to prevent overlapping of work.

Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, who is ill, was the only Congressional member not in attendance. Those present at the conference included O'Mahoney, Sumners, Eicher, Senator King (Democrat), of Utah; Representative Reece (Republican), of Tennessee; Henderson, Douglas, Oliphant, Commissioner Frank, of the SEC.; Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold, Isidor Lubin, director of the Bureau of Labor Statistics; Chairman Garland Ferguson, of the Federal Trade Commission.

outspoken Senator Glass. The Senator told The Post:

"It is perfectly well known by the two Senators from Virginia that the appointment of Judge Roberts was intended to be offensive to them.

"Neither Senator Byrd nor myself was asked if the appointment of Judge Roberts would be agreeable to us.

Plan Senate Fight.

"All I care to add is that his confirmation will be resisted by the two Senators from Virginia when his appointment is referred to the Senate."

The President's addition of a Georgia speech on August 11 to his itinerary was full of political significance. On the same day the President will visit Athens, Ga., where he will receive a degree from the State University. Such an occasion, it was pointed out, hardly would be suitable for a political speech.

However, from Athens Mr. Roosevelt will go to Barnesville, Ga., in accord with the invitation accepted yesterday, to participate in dedication of a rural electrification prject and deliver a speech "on any subject you may deem of interest to Georgians," quoting the invitation.

Presence on the inviting delegation of Camp, Federal district attorney, who is seeking George's seat, was considered significant, inasmuch as he is not a resident of the Barnesville region and has had no connection with the REA development there.

There was little doubt here that the address will be made in the interest of Camp and directly against Senator George, who, it was announced, was not "contacted" about joining the delegation to invite the President, though Senator Russell (Democrat), Georgia, was.

Halleck Asks Who Pays.

Meanwhile, there were these other political developments here:

Representative Halleck (Republican), Indiana, criticized the Presidential trip, asked who is paying for it and said the Chief Executive "must have mixed feelings" as he starts out, since "his promised purge of the 'yes, but' fellows from his party already has suffered a partial collapse."

Secretary of the Interior Ickes took occasion to praise and defend Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, in whose interests the President is scheduled to speak tomorrow. Thomas is opposed in the primary by Gov. E. W. Marland and Representative Gomer Smith.

Postmaster General Farley departed from the Capital for a vacation trip to Alaska, to be gone, many felt, while the intra-party campaign fights are under way so he may be prepared to work for Democratic nominees, as head of the national committee, in the general election drive.

Farley is reported to be opposed to any "purge" movement within the party and to feel that in thus avoiding the primary battles he will be in a stronger position to work for whomever is nominated by the Democratic voters.

To Speak in Ohio.

The President is to deliver his first speech of the trip this morning at Marietta, Ohio, at the celebration of the 150th anniversary of the settling of the Northwest territory. Not much political interest attaches to the Ohio stop, though Senator Bulkley (Democrat) is seeking renomination and is in the good graces of the Administration. He is opposed by former Governor George White, who also proclaims his loyalty to liberalism and the President.

However, this afternoon the real politics begin as the train moves into Kentucky for three speeches by Mr. Roosevelt, at Covington, Louisville and Bowling Green, primarily to aid Senator Alben Barkley, Democratic leader in the Senate, who is in a bitter and close race for renomination with Gov. A. B. (Happy) Chandler. Gov. Chandler, as chief executive of the State, will greet the President, but there is no doubt that the Presidential talks will be directed against his campaign.

Tomorrow the train moves down to Oklahoma City for a fairgrounds address before a huge crowd on behalf of Senator Thomas. Gov. Marland, one of his opponents, recently wired the President asking him not to come into the State until after the primary, but no notice was taken of the appeal.

Sunday will be spent at Fort Worth, Tex., where Mr. Roosevelt will visit at the home of his son, Elliott. On Monday, there will be a brief talk by the President at Amarillo, Tex.

Adams Offers Problem.

The train then proceeds to Colorado, where the President's course is much in doubt. There, Senator Alva Adams is seeking renomination, against a "100 per cent New Dealer," Judge Benjamin Hilliard, who announced his candidacy after a White House visit. However, Senator Adams has been loyal to the President in numerous instances, is said to be in high favor with Secretary Ickes, and steered the President's spending-lending bill through the Senate. There is considerable doubt that Mr. Roosevelt will undertake to speak openly against him.

Will Aid McAdoo.

The party proceeds then to Salt Lake City and Ogden, Utah, and then to California, where another Roosevelt supporter, Senator William G. McAdoo, is seeking renomination. The President already has sent McAdoo a letter expressing hope he would be returned to the Senate, but is expected to exert more emphatic efforts while in California.

On Saturday, July 16, Mr. Roosevelt will board the cruiser Houston at San Diego for a leisurely vacation cruise to and through the Panama Canal. On the return trip he will dock at Pensacola, Fla., and proceed to Georgia for the August 11 speeches at Athens and Barnesville.

Reminiscent of the 1936 campaign days were the ten-car special train on which the President departed at 10:30 last night. Eighty persons were aboard, including newspapermen, photographers and a White House staff composed of Secretaries Stephen T. Early and Marvin McIntyre, Dr. Ross T. McIntire, Presidential physician, and Col. E. M. Watson, military aide.

Allen Is in Party.

The President's own party includes D. Basil O'Connor, Mr. Roosevelt's former law partner; L. W. Robert, jr., secretary of the Democratic National Committee; Charles O. West, former Undersecretary of the Interior, who will go as far as Ohio; Keith Morgan and Thomas Wrigley, of the Warm Springs Foundation, and George Allen, District Commissioner.

Mr. Roosevelt spent a busy day clearing up details of work before leaving the White House for the train. He made numerous appointments to office, received almost a dozen callers, and worked on the address he will deliver at Marietta.

At the station a large crowd cheered him as he arrived to board the train, wearing a gray suit with a dark bow tie. He waved and smiled from the train platform.

Members of his official family who were present to see him off included Secretary of State Hull, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, Attorney General Cummings, Assistant Secretary of Commerce J. Monroe Johnson and Assistant Secretary of War Louis H. Johnson.

Business Tax Rule Clarified By D. C. Heads

computed upon that portion of the receipts representing the cost of such deliveries.

Complete Reports Required.

Persons having their sole place of business in the District are required to report the entire gross receipts derived from sales wherever made.

Where persons having their sole place of business in the District make deliveries out of the city pursuant to orders obtained in the District, the application for apportionment shall show the manner of determining the cost of such deliveries, which may be deducted from the receipts of the sale in filing the returns.

Bus lines, truck lines, radio communication lines and networks, telegraph lines, telephone lines, etc., are required to report the entire gross receipts derived from business originating or concluding in the District. The portion of such gross receipts to be allocated to the District shall be determined by considering the mileage of such lines within the District in relation to the total mileage of the line from which such receipts were derived.

In the case of a business located here but making sales out of the District the formula applied to compute the amount of tax allows a deduction of selling expenses, which include delivery expenses. The District's share will be computed on that portion of the receipts which represent the cost of manufacturing the goods sold (if seller was also the manufacturer) plus one-half the receipts remaining after deducting the selling and manufacturing costs.

Formula Is Stated.

If the taxpayer engaged in no manufacturing or processing in connection with such goods sold outside of the District then the tax will be computed on a figure representing one-half of the gross receipts remaining after deducting the expense of selling the commodity.

Out-of-town firms doing business here through an agent will use the following formula for computing their tax:

The portion of gross receipts representing selling expenses, which include advertising expenses, shall be allocated to the District. Where the seller is also manufacturer of the goods sold, that portion of the gross receipts representing cost of manufacturing or processing, but not including any portion of the cost of articles used in the manufacture, shall be allocated to the place where such manufacturing takes place; one-half of the receipts remaining after deduction of the selling and manufacturing costs shall be allocated to the District and added to the selling cost, upon which total figure the amount of tax shall be computed.

Where the taxpayer is not engaged in the business of manufacturing or processing the articles sold in the District, the portion of gross receipts upon which tax is to be measured shall be determined by adding that portion of the gross receipts representing selling expense to one-half the gross receipts remaining after deducting the selling expenses.

U. S. Aide to Renew Effort to Legalize Tapping of Wires

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, July 7.—Frank Carmine Nardone, of Bayonne, N. J., and three co-defendants whose appeal to the United States Supreme Court on their conviction for conspiracy to violate the internal revenue laws resulted last December in the outlawing of wire tapping as a weapon in Federal law enforcement, were reindicted by a Federal grand jury today. Indicted with them were two defendants who were not named in the first indictment.

Lester C. Dunigan, Assistant United States Attorney, who presented the evidence on which both indictments were returned said: "In this case a Supreme Court decision has barred certain types of wire-tapping evidence. An attempt will be made at the trial of this indictment to introduce wire-tapping evidence not barred b ythe Supreme Court decisoin."

Police Storm Plant, Arrest 24 Pickets

New York, July 7 (AP).—A police riot squad using crowbars broke into the struck metal works plant of the Sagamore Metals Good Corporation, in Long Island City tonight and arrested 24 pickets barricaded behind a heavy steel door in an effort to halt removal of equipment to New Jersey.

Inspector Charles P. Mooney said the men were members of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America (C. I. O.), they were charged with unlawful entry, damaging machinery to the extent of $4,000 and detaining two officials and two office employes against their will.

France Protests Killing of Soldier By Italian Guards

Rome, July 7 (U.P.).—Jules F. Blondel, Counselor of the French Embassy, has made representations to Italian Foreign Minister Count Ciano regarding a frontier incident in which a French Alpine soldier allegedly was shot and killed by Italian militiamen, it was learned tonight in diplomatic circles.

The incident was said to have occurred yesterday on the slopes of the 6,500-foot Urina Mountain in the Guil Valley. Two French Alpine soldiers reportedly crossed the frontier and were discovered by Italian mtlitiamen.

The Italian patrol reportedly pursued the French into French territory and allegedly opened fire on them, killing one.

Ciano was said to have told Blondel an inquiry had been opened.

HOLC Gives Widow Of Hero 90 Days to Pay Off Mortgage

New York, July 7.—The Home Owners' Loan Corporation agreed today to permit Mrs. Sadie L. Monssen, widow of Lieut. Mons Monssen, Naval hero, to live for 90 days in her home in Brooklyn, while the Kings County Jewish War Veterans' Association tries to rise funds to liquidate her $8,000 debt to the corporation.

Justice Algeron I. Nova, of the Supreme Court in Brooklyn, said that in a conference in his chambers today, Bernard L. Perelson, counsel for Mrs. Monssen, and Abraham Cohen, commander of the veterans' organization, had shown him plans to raise funds to aid the widow. Joseph H. Goldstein, representing the HOLC authorized the 90-day extension.

More than 100 men, women and children carried placards calling for more lenient terms for payments on their mortgages as they picketed the State and regional HOLC offices this morning.

The board members will receive $10,000 a year and will make their headquarters here.

President Roosevelt was expected to announce the appointment of an administrator of the new wages and hours law in the course of his Western trip. This official, who will be in the Labor Department, will receive $10,000 a year. The wage and hour standards prescribed in the law go into effect October 24.

The President named Harry E. Kalodner, of Philadelphia, to be a United States District judge for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, and in so doing followed the recommendation of Senator Joseph F. Guffey and David Stern, Philadelphia publisher. A former newspaperman, and formerly secretary to Gov. George H. Earle, Kalodner ran for a Philadelphia judgeship in the last election, but was defeated.

Other appointments announced by the President were:

Floyd H. Roberts, of Bristol, Va., United States judge for the Western District of Virginia; Chester S. Dishong, of Florida; J. Leslie Ford, of Delaware; Emil J. Adam, sr., of Pass Christian, Miss., to be United States marshals. H. Ferris White, of New York, State director of the National Emergency Council, and Miss Grace Glascott, of Ohio, State director of the National Emergency Council.

The President left unfilled a vacancy on the Tennessee Valley Authority, caused by the removal of Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, who has started legal proceedings to regain the chairmanship. He also left unfilled a vacancy on the Bituminous Coal Commission and the post of Ambassador to Russia.

Mail Consolidated.

The aviation bill, which was passed by Congress at the last session, consolidates air mail, rates, safety, financial supervision and other aviation activities that are now spread among the Bureau of Air Commerce, Interstate Commerce Commission, Postoffice Department and other agencies.

Mr. Noble, the first head of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, was born 56 years ago in Gouverneur, N. Y. After being graduated from Yale University in 1908, he started the manufacture of "Life Savers," using a one-room factory in a loft building. The confection brought him a fortune.

A pioneer aviation enthusiast, he travels in his own cabin plane and was one of the first persons in this country to own an autogiro. He owned considerable stock in aviation companies, but disposed of it to be eligible for his appointment.

He is married, his wife being the former Ethel Louise Tinkham. They have two daughters.

Army Ponders Purge to Give Room to Youth

Retire

Navy Journal. "Under the conditions existing in the Army, with such a diversification of duties, any attempt to eliminate on the basis of efficiency would lead to endless difficulties and inevitably result in favoritism. The Army wouldn't want it. Age-in-grade retirement seems the only fair—or at least the fairest way."

In contrast with the British army's recent elimination of many top-ranking officers the American revision would affect chiefly intermediate grades of captain, major, lieutenant colonel and colonel.

These ranks are overcrowded by a "hump" of some 4,000 officers who entered the Army during the war and remained in the service.

Asked his view on the proposal to make all officers in the World War hump eligible for promotion to brigadier general when the first officers commissioned in 1917 become eligible, Gen. Gasser replied that he saw little merit in the suggestion.

"That would be simply an advantage to the individual," he remarked. "In our study we must consider the best interests of the Government applied with fairness to the individual, of course, but with the good of the Army the paramount goal."

As a partial solution to general stagnation in promotion throughout the military service, Congress three years ago directed that an efficient second lieutenant should be promoted to first lieutenant three years after graduation from West Point, and advanced automatically to captain seven years later.

From that point to colonel, however, he still must await vacancies. Brigadier and major generals are hand-picked by the President on the recommendation of the Secretary of War and the Chief of Staff.

The Army is planning its pruning just when the Navy is increasing its commissioned personnel to serve on the new warships authorized by the billion dollar fleet expansion program. Congress voted to add 1,031 officers to the Navy in the next several years.

Taylor Heads Committee on Refugee Help

Most of Nations Frankly Inhospitable; America Urged for Settlers.

By the Associated Press.

Evian, France, July 7.—The intergovernmental committee attempting to solve the acute problem of thousands of racial and political refugees today elected Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the United States delegation, to the presidency in tribute to President Franlin D. Roosevelt, who called it into session. Senator Henry Berenger of France was made honorary president.

The conference voted to hold its third public session Saturday, when further statements of policy will be presented by national delegations, and approved appointment of two sub-committees.

One sub-committee, headed by T. W. White, of Australia, will deal with private refugee organizations; the other, to be directed by Michael Hansson, of Norway, will be a technical group to supervise a compilation of immigration laws and practices of governments represented at the conference.

Few Havens Offered.

The apparent stumbling block today was still the necessity of getting some country to receive refugees. The public addresses left little doubt most nations were indisposed to offer havens.

The most encouraging word was from Brazil, whose delegate, Helio Lobo, said the State of Sao Paulo "might" be in a position to accept an unspecified number of agricultural workers. It was pointed out, however, most of the German and Austrial refugees were city dwellers.

Even Palestine seemed to close tighter before Jewish refugees. A communication to the committee from the Arab national committee there said a delegation was en route here to argue against any increase in the Jewish population in the Holy Land.

Burden on America.

Berenger made plain that European governments expected American nations to receive refugees, saying "new countries" should bear the burden.

Argentina was lukewarm, her delegate, Dr. Tomas A. Lebreton, stressing she was "jealous" of her "own rights in all matters relating to the manner wherein and the means whereby immigrants will be allowed into our country."

The Belgian delegate said his country was filled to capacity with refugees. Beucker Andreae of the Netherlands said his country was not now in a position to admit any, except in extraordinary cases, and represented colonies as unsuitable because of climate.

Reich Urged to Help.

White of Australia declared his country "cannnot do more" than take the generous amount it is now taking, while the Canadian representative, Hume Wrong, called upon Germany to "do something" by giving her opinion on the refugee problem and relaxing restrictions on removal of possessions and cash.

[World Jewish organizations petitioned the conference to protest to Germany against the anti-Semetic campaign and to ask the Reich to permit emigrating Jews to take part of their property with them, the United Press said.

[A memorandum from the World Jewish Congress signed by Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, of New York, said the conference would fail in its duty if it did not protest "this shocking system which tramples under foot the fundamental principles of justice and humanity." Wise estimated 200,000 to 300,000 Jews would leave greater Germany in the next few years.—Editor's Note]

British Doctors to "Striks."

London, July 7 (AP).—British doctors threatened a possible "stay-in strike" today to prevent admission of additional Austrian physicians to practice in this country.

Dr. A. Welply, general secretary of the Medical Practitioners Union, said if representations to members of the House of Commons failed, "much more drastic action will be taken—something will be done to arouse the whole country; it may possibly develop into what is known as a stay-in strike."

He cited a recent home office proposal to set up a medical committee to select Austrian doctors who would be allowed to practice here and said this was causing "some disquiet."

Nazi Stiff-Arms Old Glory, Avers All U. S. Will, Too

Riverhead, N. Y., July 7 (AP).—Martin E. Wunderlich, a member of the German-American Volksbund, amid angry members in the Suffolk County court room, predicted today the Nazi salute would replace the American form of saluting the flag.

A witness in the trial of six directors of the German-American settlement League (a Bund affiliate charged with violating State requirements of oath-bound societies), Wunderlich was asked by Prosecutor Lindsay R. Henry to salute the Stars and Stripes.

Wunderlich responded by raising his arm in the stiffi gesture of the Hitler salute.

"Is that the American salute?" Henry asked sharply.

"No," Wunderlich said, "but it will be."

Ernest Mueller, president of the league, returned a negative answer when asked if he believed in Hitler's principles, but said he did believe that "to a certain extent" Jews were enemies of the United States."

2 Prisoners Recaptured After Break at Towson

Towson, Md., July 7 (AP).—Two prisoners rushed Warden Worthington Bosley and escaped from the Towson jail late today but were back in custody 30 minutes later when Deputy Warden Harry Morris recaptured them after a chase.

Franco's Navy ShellsStubborn Valencia Lines

By the United Press.

Hendaye, France, July 7.—Gen. Franco swung his navy into action today along the eastern seacoast of Spain as loyalist and insurgent reports indicated the insurgent attack had bogged down against desperate loyalist resistance north of Valencia.

The 10,000-ton cruiser Canarias, flagship of the insurgent fleet, moved to within 12 miles of Sagunto, coastal stronghold north of Valencia, and began shelling loyalist lines with its 8-inch guns. Two destroyers also moved down the coast, training their fire on the Valencia-Sagunto highway.

Gen. Jose Miaja, commander of the Valencia-Madrid sector, threw almost his entire eastern army into the 20-mile front between the Mediterranean and Segobre. Dispatches from both insurgent and loyalist sources indicated the government lines had checked Franco's advance a dozen miles from Sagunto.

Dispatches from Valencia said every able-bodied man and many women had been pressed into duty, digging trenches and stretching barbed wire for a defense of Valencia similar to that which has held the insurgents from Madrid for more than 18 months.

Loyalist dispatches claimed successes on the Teruel front, where strong insurgent attacks in the Campillo sector were smashed with heavy losses. Valencia also reported similar successes at Cascante and in the Valgona zone.

Gen. Miguel Aranda's column was reported still battering at loyalist lines around the walled town of Nules.

2 Die in Ambush As Deputy Sheriff Traps 2 Suspects

Beckley, W. Va., July 7 (AP).—A gun battle in the isolated hill country of the Clear Fork district cost the life of Deputy Sheriff Jess Thompson and a man identified only as Bennett, the sheriff's office said today.

Thompson, with a companion, had set a trap for persons who robbed a Lawson store several nights ago, officers said, and related the battle occurred when Bennett and his son came to the deputy's hiding place this morning.

Mrs. Georgia Nalles, of Charleston, daughter of Zack Karantonis, whose store was robbed of $600 in merchandise, said Thompson and Rullie Stover, whom the officer had deputized, found the loot hidden in the hills and had kept a three-day vigil in hopes of catching the thieves.

She related Bennett, a coal loader at Ameagle, and his son came to the cache today. Thompson, she said, surprised them and ordered "hands up."

The younger Bennett obeyed, Mrs. Nalle asserted, but the father raised only one hand, and with the other shot Thompson with a rifle. The deputy returned the fire, Mrs. Nalle said.

Britain Rushes Men, Warships To Halt Arabs

Palestine

massing south of Tegart's Wall," the $500,000 electrified fence recently completed along the Syrian border, north of Palestine, to keep trouble-makers out of the country.

The news of Arab reinforcements was received as Britain ordered two battalions of troops, each normally consisting of more than 800 men, from Egypt at "the earliest possible date."

Already at Haifa were the British cruisers Emerald and Enterprise, each of more than 7,500 tons. Both arrived as the result of an emergency call.

En route to the scene was the 32,000-ton cruiser Repulse, detached from its Mediterranean patrol duties at Malta to relieve the Emerald whose homeward journey from the East Indies was interrupted by the summons for reinforcements.

A spokesman at military headquarters said 8,500 British troops now were in the Holy Land. Police and other units brought the security forces to 10,000. Sailors and marines from the Repulse and Enterprise would augment Britain's armed might by 1,700 men.

Pointing out that the rioting resulted in the death of both Jewish and Arabs who were innocent of creating disorders, Jewish leaders warned that civil war was "imminent should the Jews give up self-restraint for acts of revenge which dishonor the Jewish name and undermine progress toward a national home."

Among scattered outbreaks today were these:

Assailants fired on a group of Jewish laborers in Haifa's mixed quarter, killing one and wounding seven.

Six Arabs were injured by a bomb explosion in the old quarter of Jerusalem.

A South African Moslem with a companion was ambushed in a taxicab on the Jaffa-Haifa highway. He died of bullet wounds and his companion was wounded seriously.

A number of rail and oil workers in Haifa struck in protest against the outbreaks. Shops were closed as Arabs attempted to hold demonstrations.

The disorders, the most serious since the six-month Arab general strike in 1936, came as the British commission headed by Sir John Woodhead continued a 2½ month study of the plan for division of the Holy Land into three separate Jewish and Arab states and for a reduced mandate.

D. C.'s Chinese March in Mass For First Time

700 Parade on Anniversary of Invasion, Hear Dr. Wang Speak.

Commemorating almost 1,000,000 of their soldiers and women and children who have perished in the undeclared Sino-Japanese war, 700 Washington Chinese yesterday paraded in the hot July sun through Chinatown on the first anniversary of the Nipponese invasion.

Laundries and restaurants, art and antique shops and noodle factories were closed as the silent procession wound through the streets. There were few women, for, Chinese custom, the men carried the brunt of the demonstration.

But the occasion was the first in history that a major portion of the District's Chinese population had turned out at one time. The parade began at 10 a. m. and many of the marchers were heavy-eyed after laboring until 3 a. m. over chop suey kettles and with flatirons.

Children Lead.

There was very little conversation and there was no music. As their pretty young teachers flicked wicker fans in the scorching sun, boys and girls from the Chinese School in Mount Vernon M. E. Church marched.

Hundreds of serious and silent young and older men followed them. For the most part they were from the province of Canton, where the metropolitan capital has suffered terrifically from air bombardment which killed and maimed thousands of noncombatants.

Forming at 607 H street northwest, headquarters of the Chinese National Salvation Association of Washington, the parade proceeded silently down H street to Ninth street, and up Ninth street to the Mount Vernon Place Church, where the marchers were addressed by Chinese Ambassador Wang.

Dr. Wang Speaks.

As Dr. Wang and other speakers predicted ultimate victory for China, the crowd applauded. Continuation of a united China and the war against Japan until every Japanese is driven from Chinese soil, also were pledged by Dr. Wang and others. A three-minute period of silence in memory of the dead was observed at noon.

Washington Chinese already have sent $50,000 to swell China's war chest, H. F. Chen, member of the association's executive committee here, reported.

Shortly after the ceremonies were over, the banners the marchers had carried, which screamed in big letters "Support Chinese Battle For Peace and Democracy," "Down With Japanese Militarism" and "Unity of 450,000,000 Chinese Against Japanese Invaders" disappeared.

After 1 p. m. the stores, shops, laundries and noodle factories opened again.

Chinatown went to work once more—to earn more dollars to go to the relief of their country.

The FHA's Contribution.

Continued activity in the field of residential construction, despite the industrial slump of recent months, is undoubtedly a factor in the measure of recovery which now seems to be taking place. During the depression years of 1932 and 1933, home building was almost at a standstill. In the 1937-38 depression, however, residential building was affected far less than industry in general.

One reason for this continued activity in the building industry is the fact that it has never fully recovered from its major slump of a few years ago. The shortage of houses and apartments in some parts of the country has not been overcome. But a more significant factor is the mortgage insurance program of the Federal Housing Administration. The steady increase in the volume of building financed with the aid of FHA since the liberalizing amendments to the mortgage insurance act became effective early this year has been one of few bright spots in a gloomy economic picture.

FHA's striking gains should not be interpreted, however, as a net increase in residential building. About 70 per cent of the mortgages it has accepted for insurance represent new construction. The remaining 30 per cent cover homes previously built. Indications are, moreover, that a larger part of the home financing business is now taking advantage of the mortgage insurance offered by the FHA. Hence, a 60 per cent increase in the value of mortgages accepted for insurance during June as compared with the same month last year may not mean a 60 per cent gain in home building activity.

Records of the Bureau of Labor Statistics show that permits were issued by cities of 2,500 population or over for construction of houses valued at $306,854,464 during the first five months of this year. For the same period in 1937 the comparable estimate was $350,011,721. The decline is slight, however, in comparison with the sharp drop in industrial production for the same period. And home building this spring has been far ahead of the 1936 record, while industrial production has been substantially below the level attained during the first half of that year.

On the other hand, the higher value of the permits issued during the first five months of 1937 should not be permitted to obscure the optimistic side of the picture presented by the FHA. The new mortgage insurance program did not get well under way until March. The latest statistics gathered by the Department of Labor on national building trends are for May. Since there is often a lag of several months between the application for a mortgage and the issuance of a building permit, it is probable that the effects of the FHA's increased activity are not yet fully reflected in the records of building activity now available.

In any event, there is ample evidence that the FHA has given a real stimulus to an industry where much of the country's unemployment is concentrated. The $1,000,000,000 mortgage insurance program forecast for 1938 by Administrator McDonald will rival the PWA in the creation of jobs. But only private capital will be used under the FHA program and, if sound insurance principles are maintained, its ultimate cost to taxpayers will be nil.

Spotlight On The South.

President Roosevelt's assertion that the South is "right now the Nation's No. 1 economic problem" has brought a flood of comment, approving and protesting. There is general agreement that the South, despite rich natural endowments, is the poorest section of the United States. Even so, the South has made progress toward achievement of a higher standard of living. In fact, the rapidity of her industrial development has been a cause of dismay to Northern manufacturers.

The idea that absentee owners are draining away the capital needed to enrich Southern communities is strange doctrine and bad economics. Capital wisely invested, giving work and wages to the population, adds to a community's resources whether the owners live nearby or far away. Indeed, the large corporate industries of today draw their capital resources from all parts of the country. For that reason, they are able to establish themselves in regions that would otherwise be left undeveloped.

The problems of the South are the typical problems of all backward areas. Poverty has necessitated low standards of living and those low standards in turn mean relative inefficiency, inadequate education, and less justification for higher pay. The agricultural problems of the South, too, have been made more difficult because of its dependence upon a single crop—cotton. As a result, critics of the Administration's policies are not slow to suggest that its sudden interest in the economic problems of the Southern States has been stimulated by miscarriage of its plan for enriching cotton growers. They also take occasion to point out that the efforts to raise Southern purchasing power by raising wages first are likely to prove an economic boomerang.

Dispassionate and informed observers will welcome an objective analysis of the South's economic problems, always remembering that in a country where labor, capital and goods may move freely from north to south, from east to west, economic inequalities tend to even out. But all such adjustments take time; they cannot be achieved by legislation nor by using the surplus of one section to provide temporary relief for another.

The Problem Of Refugees.

The problem of German and Austrian refugees which delegates to the intergovernmental conference at Evian, France, are being called upon to consider before taking up the refugee question as a whole, is, to say the least, an extraordinarily difficult one. There is practically no parallel for it in modern history.

The persecution of racial, religious and political minorities is unfortunately, no new phenomenon. Nor is there anything novel in such a development leading to the mass migration of harassed individuals and groups from the despotic and intolerant countries where they are not wanted to free and enlightened lands where they can find a haven. Americans, certainly, are well aware of such recurrent movements of population which, from the days of the Pilgrim Fathers to the more recent flow of European refugees, have added so large a number of highly useful citizens to our population.

But the present refugee problem differs from that of the past in at least two very important particulars. In the first place, the erstwhile havens are fewer and far more restricted than in the past. In the face of difficult economic conditions and extensive and chronic unemployment, even those nations most sympathetic with the plight of German Jews and all other persecuted minorities seeking escape from an intolerable situation in their homelands, are loath to add to their own difficulties by permitting unrestricted immigration.

In view of the fact that more than 30 governments accepted President Roosevelt's invitation and are now participating in the Evian conference, however, this circumstance need not of itself prove an insuperable obstacle to doing something constructive for the refugees. Not all parts of the world are overpopulated and many areas would stand to profit by the influx of hard-working and able individuals whose only crime is their racial origin, their religious beliefs or their political attitudes.

But the problem is enormously complicated by the fact that, through the deliberate action of the German authorities, those unfortunate individuals who would like to emigrate are permitted to do so only after they have been deprived of the means by which they could establish themselves elsewhere on a self-supporting basis. They are, in Myron Taylor's accurate description, being "dumped" on the world, "turned adrift without thought or care as to what will become of them or where they will go."

The situation is clearly one of international concern. For as Mr. Taylor points out:

> If the present currents of migration are permitted to continue to push anarchically upon the receiving states, and if some governments are to continue to toss large sections of their populations lightly upon a distressed and unprepared world, then there is catastrophic human suffering ahead which can only result in general unrest and in general international strain.

It is, therefore, clearly the duty of those powers that are showing an interest in the problem of German and Austrian refugees to exert every peaceful kind of pressure on the Third Reich to secure a moderation of the present persecution of unwanted elements.

But even were such representations to the Berlin government successful, much would remain to be done by outside nations to relieve the horrible plight of the refugees. In this particular private philanthropy can be of great assistance. But it cannot do everything. The task of providing homes for those millions of people who "are actually and potentially without a country," can, in the last analysis, be solved only through intergovernmental action.

This is the purpose of the Evian conference. And it would be a shameful failure if the 32 nations represented at Evian allow that purpose to go unfulfilled.

A Helpful Suggestion.

Former Gov. Landon's address at Council Bluffs was an interesting reminder that the country is confronted by problems of a more basic nature than a temporary upturn of business indices. "Our most important immediate job," he said, "is to get out of this business depression." But Mr. Landon was not thinking in terms of a temporary spurt of industrial activity. He was more concerned with the adoption of policies that will save the country from another sinking spell "as soon as the Government spending splurge is over."

Present indications that a new period of recovery has begun are cause for widespread satisfaction. The average citizen is far more interested in the restoration of jobs and steady incomes than in proving any theory right or wrong. But no thoughtful person is likely to forget the impediment still remaining in the way of lasting recovery merely because a new wave of optimism seems to be sweeping over the country.

Mr. Landon believes that certain lessons ought to be learned from the 1937-38 depression. Obviously this experience does not mean that genuine social reforms should be abandoned. But it certainly does mean that policies designated as great social objectives for political reasons may be carried to the point of grave danger to the national welfare.

A spending policy that means better living conditions for a limited number for a limited period, for example, can not be regarded as a great social measure if it has the effect of drying up the sources of private employment. With the present turn toward recovery the Administration has an opportunity to study the effects of previous policies and avoid some of the mistakes which contributed to the 1937 slump. If it follows that course diligently, the country may escape another depression when the stimulating effects of the present spending program wear off.

In effect Mr. Landon issued a challenge to the Administration to eliminate the political impediments to a business revival. That can scarcely be considered a partisan attack. Rather it is a helpful suggestion. The way in which the Administration meets this test may determine in large measure whether or not the present up-turn will be merely a temporary spurt or the beginning of a long-time climb toward economic stability.

An Important Test Case.

In challenging the right of President Roosevelt to remove him from office Dr. A. E. Morgan, former chairman of the TVA, has raised an issue of great importance. The right to remove from office carries with it a potential power of control over all those subject to removal. Hence, the more liberal the discretionary authority vested in the President to discharge subordinates, the greater becomes the scope of his power.

If the Chief Executive were unable to remove administrative officers who obstruct his plans or refuse to co-operate in carrying out his policies, he would of course be seriously handicapped in the discharge of his duties. Consequently, it is generally conceded that so far as the purely executive establishments are concerned, he should be given a free hand. In the Myers case, for example, the Supreme Court upheld the right of President Wilson to remove a postmaster, even though the law provided that he should serve four years and be removable by the President only with the consent of the Senate.

A different question arose, however, when President Roosevelt summarily dismissed the late Commissioner Humphrey of the Federal Trade Commission, merely because he felt that the work of the FTC could "be carried out more effectively with the personnel of my own selection." Mr. Humphrey had also been appointed for a fixed term of years, and under the law he was subject to removal only for certain specified causes. In this case the Supreme Court held that the President lacked the power to remove the commissioner for any reasons except those designated in the law. That opinion was based upon the fact that the FTC exercises quasi-legislative and quasi-judicial powers which set it apart from purely executive agencies.

The Court also stressed the intention of Congress when setting up the Federal Trade Commission to "create a body of experts who shall gain experience by length of service—a body which shall be independent of executive authority except in its selection, and free to exercise its judgment without the leave or hindrance of any other official or any department of the Government." Legal arguments aside, it is evident that if the President were in a position to "fire" members of so-called independent agencies exercising legislative and judicial powers, he could thwart the will of Congress in setting up such organizations.

In an advisory opinion Solicitor General Jackson held that the TVA was an executive agency performing executive functions. Hence he concluded that the Myers case constituted a precedent validating the President's dismissal of Dr. Morgan. The executive status of TVA was also assumed under the provisions of the omnibus reorganization bill. It would have given the President full power to shift, combine, or reorganize the TVA along with other executive agencies of the Government.

Senator Norris objected vigorously to this proposal, however, alleging that "the very theory of the Tennessee Valley Authority act itself was to make the organization independent of any department, independent of any President, independent of any political change which might come over the country." That interpretation is further strengthened by the provision in the law stating that any member of the board may be removed from office at any time by a concurrent resolution of the Senate and the House.

The desirability of preserving the independence of the TVA and protecting it from executive interference in its affairs is a question to be discussed on its merits. The court decision obviously will be determined by more technical legal considerations. Regardless of the outcome, Dr. Morgan has performed a public service by insisting upon a judicial determination of the status of the TVA and its appointive heads.

We see mto be approaching the corner around which prosperity is, but let's not try to turn the corner on two wheels and upset the apple cart.

Not A Mirage.

Cat On Griddle?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
"No purge," The Post reports Dr. Roosevelt as saying in the case of court-pack objector Van Nuys. But your cartoonist has depicted a millstone around the neck of the intended victim. Perhaps it is not as fatal as it looks. If you know where to press the button the air can be let out and the millstone becomes a life-raft. That's the magic of political inventions and life in general under the New Deal.

The spirit of patriotism compels us to believe whatever Dr. Roosevelt concocts for our credulity—isn't he commander in chief. We've heard him say things before—especially promises. We simply reverse them—before he does—so know in advance what results will be, what he means.

A main characteristic of the New Deal and its spokesmen has been that they resemble nothing so much as a cat on a hot griddle.

Lancaster Board's View.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
The interesting article in The Post of July 3 regarding the one hundredth anniversary of the first contract entered into between the Government and the railroads for the carrying of the United States mails brings to mind the story of the action of the school board of Lancaster, Ohio, in 1828, one year after the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad received its charter.

The board was asked to allow the use of the schoolhouse for a debate on whether or not railroads were practicable. The answer was:

> We welcome the use of the schoolroom to debate all proper questions in, but such things as railroads and telegraphs are impossibilities and a rank infidelity. There is nothing in the Word of God about them. If God had designed that His intelligent creatures should travel at the frightful speed of 15 miles an hour by steam, he would have foretold it through His holy prophets. It is a device of Satan to lead immortal souls down to hell.

Another instance of being born 100 years too soon. But the dire financial straits of the railroads of today, in spite of their unsuccessful pleas for governmental assistance, leads one to wonder whether a good many descendants of the school board of Lancaster are not still treading the halls of Congress.

ROBERT F. COGSWELL.
Washington, July 6.

GIO In Puerto Rico.

To the Editor of The Post, Sir:—
In my opinion, Jersey City is not the only place where the CIO is not welcome, due to some of their extreme actions.

From January 3 to February 10 of this year, the CIO effected an absolute embargo on cargo entering and leaving Puerto Rico. Not a ton of merchandise was moved from either the United States or the island, which resulted in the destruction of hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of fruits and other perishable goods. The needlework industry could not secure material from the United States, thereby causing many factories to close and the loss of income to more than 30,000 workers. Other enterprises were also hard hit, and the feeling against the CIO was very bitter. In previous years, differences between capital and labor were settled amicably, without resorting to costly strikes.

Involved in the controversy was a contemplated increase for 2,500 Puerto Rican longshoremen, out of a total population of 1,800,000. The steamship companies offered an increase and were willing to leave the settlement of disputes to an arbitration committee. This offer was flatly rejected by the CIO delegates from the United States for a period of five weeks. They finally agreed to mediate. In the meantime, millions of dollars in trade had been lost to both the United States and Puerto Rico.

In the light of these facts, it is no wonder that in various sections of our country the CIO, owing to occasional Communistic tendencies, is losing ground to the AFL. It is also understandable why some candidates indorsed by the CIO have been rejected by the voters.

TRAVELER.
New York City, July 2.

Washington Traffic.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
I want to congratulate you on the fine service, it seems to me, you are doing in publishing the series of articles on traffic accidents.

I have traveled much in the world. I have driven a car and crossed streets in many large cities on several continents. I have, however, never known conditions worse than—and I do not recall at this moment conditions as bad as—they are in Washington today. The wide streets without an "island" for safety, the speed of traffic, and the abundance of careless and inexperienced drivers from all parts of the country make the way of the pedestrian a hard one in Washington.

You are trying to do something to alleviate his lot and, as a pedestrian, I thank you.

Americans In Spain.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
John America, writing in answer to Louis Bromfield and Frederick Thompson in their appeal for funds to return wounded members of the International Brigades to the United States, seems to be either greatly misinformed or is just spouting.

As a former member of the International Brigades, having served for more than a year in the Abraham Lincoln Brigade, and as executive secretary of the Washington Chapter of the Friends of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade, I believe that I am a little more qualified to speak on the subject than is Mr. America.

The International Brigades is made up of several thousands of volunteers from all corners of the earth. Contrary to many press reports there are no Russian infantrymen in Spain, nor have there ever been. Approximately 3,700 Americans are in the International Brigades. Some are in the Fifteenth, or Abraham Lincoln Brigade, which is the English language brigade, and one of the five International Brigades. Those who are not attached to the Fifteenth are in some auxiliary service, such as transport, communications, medical corps, etc.

The American volunteers are truly representative of this great country. There are Protestants, Catholics, Jews, and I have even seen a Hindu. The political affiliations are as varied as are the religious views. Republicans, Democrats, Socialists, Communists, and maybe even a couple of single-taxers and wobblies, all get along together in their common fight to defeat fasciam. Almost all of the men are members of trade unions, C. I.O., A. F. of L. and independent. Nationalities colors and home States are also true to the American pattern.

The courage of these men is greater than many of us can conceive. It takes more than adventurism or bravado to leave home, family and job (there were no bands, flags nor pretty birls) to fight in a foreign country. Rather, shall we say, it takes the spirit of a Lafayette, or a von Steuben, or a Kosciusko, a truly American spirit. These are the representatives of America and Americanism, not Mayor Hague or any of his stooges.

EDWARD YOUNG.

Another "Ex-Marine" Joins The Fray.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
As another ex-marine, I'd like to join the fray with Musketeers "Ex-Marine," Planck, and May. I am glad to see that the peace workers themselves are now being heard from. Let's hope that the others will follow the lead of Peace Worker Finch in giving us some facts on the situation.

Barefoot's claim about "peace workers' gangs having Congress on the run for three years" is funny. If such is true, I doubt if their pressure on the elected representatives of the majority of voters was any greater than the invisible but insidious lobbying carried on here all the time by those who hope to profit by our getting mixed up in a war.

Barefoot's contention that "cringing pacifists helped Mussolini conquer Ethiopia" disregards the facts of history. Italy has been trying to gobble up Ethiopia ever since 1889. For over 100 years there has been a competition between Italy, England, and France to see who could grab the largest slice of Africa, and if England and France concluded that barbaric Ethiopia would be no worse off under Italy than under it's own King, then wouldn't we have been suckers to get ourselves into a position where we could have been blamed for all that went wrong? After all, the Italian-Ethiopian war was not a struggle over the preservation of democracy.

I agree with your correspondent that "neither Japan nor the United States could carry an army across the Pacific." While such a feat would not be impossible, it would be pretty silly and totally useless. Too bad our militarists didn't think of that in 1917 in the case of Germany when we were told that our homes were about to be destroyed by the "invading Huns." As I remember it, the danger of invasion was so great that we had to squander many billions in cash, hastily train millions of soldiers and ship them in hurriedly and expensively constructed boats, across a much smaller ocean than the Pacific, in order to find the "invaders" who were being kept pretty busy some 3,000 miles away from our democratic shores.

Barefoot awards to all peace workers such percentages as 100 per cent for cowardice, emotion, shortsightedness, poor judgement, poor perspective, incapacity for national leadership, etc., proves his own 100 per cent ignorance of the peace movement and another 100 per cent swallowing of war propaganda. In thus castigatitng the hard-earned accomplishments of thousands of sane thinkers who strive to promote the same brand of idealism that our greatest men in history have stood for, I wonder if our friend includes such peace workers of history as Moses, Buddha, Confucius, Jesus, Franklin, Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln, and Wilson. These were all men who worked for peace, and "put many words together" in order to guide us in a continuing search for peace, sanity and mutual well being.

While present-day conditions have forced peace workers to the sad realization that if we are going to live like wolves with our fellow men then we must be prepared to defend ourselves from other wolves, it is still not clear to me how "big peaceful nations—willing to use economic and military pressure (another war to end war) to convince bandit powers that war is disastrous" is going to solve the problem mentioned by Ex-Marine May. How will "economic and military pressure" satisfy the hunger problems of the nation with 70,000,000 people and a high birth rate who must try to keep themselves well fed from a volcanic island soil that must supply food for three people per each acre of only moderately arable land? Will such military pressure satisfy the poorly filled stomachs of a race where during the period of 1927-29 prosperity, the average family income was less than $30 per month (making the purchase of foreign-grown food almost impossible), and where four minor earthquakes per day are the usual order, with a reasonable expectation of major earthquakes as often as we have Presidential inaugurations?

It is easy for us Americans living on a land where an average of eight acres of the richest farm soil in the world feeds each person, to call other people "bandits" when fundamentally they are simply trying to assure themselves of a way of getting enough to eat, in the only place and in the only manner in which they know how to do it. In my opinion, it requires a good deal more serious thinking than what propaganda-ridden Barefoot has emoted in order to solve such a problem, and it will never be solved properly by calling other nations bad names because we don't approve of their actions.

The Post Impressionist

Fishing.

NO, Editor Man, you're wrong again. This piece I'm writing will not create sales resistance in sporting goods customers. For sporting goods customers are amateur fishermen, and nothing but death can cure amateur fishermen.

So this piece won't hurt anybody's business at all. If fishermen thought, or if they read anything in your paper except the fishing news, it might be different. Amateur fishing is not an occupation or even an outdoor sport. It's a disease. There will be people doing it long after the remaining two fish have been caught from the Chesapeake and its tributaries. The sale of bait and hooks and sinkers and lines and reels will go on uninterrupted 20 years after Queeens Neck and Wire Narrows and other places like that have ceased even to smell of fish.

Nearly every—if not every—fisherman once caught some fish. He had the luck to run into a school of hardhead or trout or bluefish years ago, and snake 'em in like nobody's business. From that time on he was a marked man. The old bug had permeated his system never to be eradicated. After that a certain amount of his income was set aside to go fishing; a certain number of days scheduled to squat on his humid rump, his feet in bilgewater, toss a line far across the empty waters and think "I'm gonna get one this time." Sheer lunacy. Now and then, say about twice a year, he will yell, "Got one—oh boy, I've got a good one," and begin reeling in, a look of ecstasy on his fatuous and sun-cooked pan. After a few minutes of happy reeling he will say, "Well, I'll be a go-to-hell! It's a shark"—or a toad, or a skate; one of those vermin of the salt water that, along with spider crabs, are there to add intensity and incurableness to the insanity of the afflicted angler.

I know, for I'm one of 'em. I have fished a certain number of times every season since that time I ran into a fine run of blue fishing just below Annapolis. The gulls were gathering up the "chum" the blues had made of a school of alewives. Black fins were cutting the surface. By trolling through that fin-forested stretch I caught one every few minutes—nice, 2-pound blues that stood on end out of the water and fought every inch of the way into the boat. One such experience as that and a man is never the same again. Although his better judgment, backed by expensive experience, tells him it's a such-and-such lie, every large puddle of water contains many, many, hungry fish yearning to be hooked and counting the hours till somebody comes along with a bait or a drone.

* * * *

The people who rent you boats or who take out parties to "guide" to the fishing grounds—well, if ever you find out their actual opinion of an amateur fisherman, don't tell me. I'm going on being one of those things, even if their opinion of me is as bad as I fear it is. They look upon the amateur fisherman as just what he is—a harmless lunatic who can't help being that way. They keep their faces straight while they tell us where we'd better go if we want to catch 'em. It is now Saturday night, and the informer knows where "they bit good last Tuesday; feller brought in a boat load of 'em." I'd hate to think how long ago that boatload actually came in. Right after the Ararat landing, probably. There is always at every fishing resort one guy with the reputation of a wizard; who reads the fishes' minds; for whom, when a fish school moves, the headmaster of such school leaves a forwarding address.

You try to get him, but you never can. There are three morons ahead of you. Line forms to the right, toward St. Elizabeths.

And always, before you start fishing (if anybody else is up at that hour of the day; for a 3 a. m. start is a part of it, even though you're not going to fish until 9), somebody calls out "Bring me some fish, ha, ha," and you answer "How many d'ye want, ha, ha." Ritual. And when you return, skunked again, you bromide at him that you left 'em where you got 'em. Too many to bring home. More ritual.

The last time I went I brought home sun-cooked hands and a face that was one blister from ear to ear and from Adam's apple to what I would think with if I weren't a fisherman. That was all except a hook-snag in one thumb, a pair of bilge-soaked dogs and some pants saturated with squid viscera and bloodworm essence. Yet, as we say down South, that "didn't cyore me none." Because, since I got back, I saw a feller who has a friend who knows a guy who knows of a place where all you need to do is bait your hook and throw it over. You hardly need the bait to get one every time your hook hits the water. And I'm going there—first time I can get a chance and somebody to go with me to help pay for it.

Yes, even though I know I might just as well go out into the back yard, sit in a puddle of ice water thickened with fish viscera, put my feet into a pool of filthy muck, fish in a tub, have some one turn a burning glass on my face, and tear up eleven paper dollars between "bites."

Wrong History

By Edwin Muller.

Distorted News.

BOTH IN ENGLAND and on the Continent, trivial and freakish items tend to crowd out other American news. The editors play up the serious news from Berlin and Rome. Then, to balance their papers, they print the story about the mule in Kansas that had its face lifted. It's hard to realize how much the foreign conception of us is based on silly little items that are tucked away in the corners of our newspapers.

To see how completely the picture of America can be distorted, we must go to the controlled press of Germany, Italy and Russia. Mayor LaGuardia once referred in an uncomplimentary manner to the Hitler way of government. Here, in part, is the German rebuttal as set forth in Der Angriff:

"LaGuardia's career as New York's Mayor it notable by the fact that gangsters, when they had sufficiently bribed him, were able to pillage and kidnap with more impunity than ever before. The American Government heads seem afraid of the New York underworld's revolvers, which respond to the whistle of the New York gangster-in-chief—LaGuardia."

* * * *

UNDER A DICTATOR, the newspaper is a weapon in a war—and a dictator is always at war. If his people are uncomfortable, meagerly supplied with the necessities of life, they must be told that other peoples are still more uncomfortable. To show that a democracy is powerless to prevent a Communist revolution, our strike news is given great prominence, under such headlines as "Revolt and Wild Demolition, Dead and Wounded." It is said or implied that every single strike is the result of "subterranean Communist propaganda."

The Russian press depicts us as indulging in unrestrained lawlessness. In issue after issue of Krokodil, Moscow weekly, are cartoons of spectators and players lying dead on the football field, gangsters conducting public kidnapings, judges kowtowing to wealthy swindlers.

* * * *

ALTHOUGH the Russians are allowed to admire us for our machinery and mass production, the authorities systematically exaggerate the things that are undeniably wrong with us—the waste of our economic system, the suffering caused by the depression. Some of the Russian papers have run pictures that purported to show Americans starving to death in multitudes.

And so you could follow the impressions of us around the world and nowhere would you find a community of average people who have anything approaching a clear picture of what we are like. And what about ourselves? Does anyone believe that we alone see the other peoples of the earth clearly and without prejudice?

We are like men wandering around in a dense fog. Each of us sees the others as menacing, beastlike figures. If the fog lifted, perhaps we'd all look pretty much alike. The common people of the world aren't very different from each other. If they had all known that, would there have been a World War?

They are dangerous things, these false pictures that we have, each of the other, and they are making history. Making it wrong.

Smiles In The White House

How refreshing to read that when two of our most prominent citizens met at the White House the other day they did not converse about politics or the depression or relief or labor problems; that they took neither themselves nor the state of the Nation too seriously, but simply, as one paper headlined it, "swapped yarns about fish and teeth."

"I told him I lost a tooth," Shirley said, "and he told me about Sistie and Buzzie losing their teeth. Then I told him I had caught a salmon at Vancouver Island, and he told me about some fish he caught."

The President might have pointed out to Shirley in the newspapers of that very morning a good yarn about fish and teeth. A member of the crew of the New Bedford dragger Venture II reported that while fishing he sneezed his upper teeth out. Two days later he caught a 10-pound cod proudly wearing the teeth. That would have made Shirley Temple smile. But undoubtedly she smiled enough as it was. We hope the movie cameras ground out yards of film preserving for posterity the two most famous smiles in present-day America—one worth millions of dollars, the other worth millions of votes.

Oil Expropriation

By William S. Culbertson,
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Mr. Culbertson, a former United States Ambassador to Chile and an expert in Latin-American affairs generally, will extend his argument on this theme in an article soon to appear in "Trouble Below the Border," an Atlantic presentation.

EXPROPRIATION of the oil properties in Mexico raises questions which involve the economic well-being and political responsibility of the American people.

Undoubtedly Mexico has, like every sovereign state, the right to take property for public purposes. The United States has recognized the right. But the condition upon which private property may be taken is payment of compensation. Assuming Mexico's willingness to pay, two difficult problems remain: Valuation and method of payment. With her credit already weakened by a large public foreign debt and a large internal debt, there is not much hope for payment of compensation representing the "fair assured and effective value" of which Secretary Hull has spoken. In fact, so precarious is Mexico's financial position that expropriation at once brought with it a rapid deterioration in economic conditions, including the almost complete stoppage of oil exports and of production in other industries depending on foreign supplies, decline of foreign trade, the curtailment of credit which affected adversely wholesale trade, rise in the prices paid by the consumer and appearance of fiscal difficulties which are likely to increase as time goes on.

Opposition Does Not Criticize Social Aim.

IF IT should be argued that these are penalties which must be paid in the interest of social reform, it should be answered with emphasis that those who object to expropriation are not opposed to social reform which is carried through in an orderly and fair way, which gives due consideration to rights established in good faith, and which accomplishes its ends over a period of time necessary for proper adjustments. And it may be added that such an approach brings more permanent and happy results for those whom the reform is designed to benefit.

The American citizen who considers the significance of expropriation in Mexico should realize that American prosperity—his individual property—is vitally affected by the prosperity of American business in foreign lands. Since the turn of the century changes have taken place in our economic life which make us no longer able to disregard conditions in the rest of the world. But our ideas of what is good for the nation necessarily lagged behind the economic facts. Much of the confusion of public opinion on foreign affairs today arises from the fact that our thinking has not caught up with our new relation to foreign trade and foreign investment.

We have become a world state, economically speaking, whether we like it or not. If we are to grow, our overseas expansion should go on. The advocacy of a self-sufficient America is a doctrine of despair. It is the Falstaffian policy of running away from opportunity. Our economic frontiers are no longer coextensive with our territorial frontiers. They are far out to sea and in foreign countries. National abundance will come, not from a restricted, suppressed economic regime but rather from an expanding creative order on a world scale; that is, not within our political borders but within our economic frontiers. This is the broad practical reason why American citizens generally are concerned with expropriation in Mexico.

American capital has flowed naturally to Latin-American countries. We have in Latin America investments totaling over $4,500,000,000. About one-third consists of loans to governments or investments in foreign-controlled corporations. The other two-thirds is in oil properties, mines, utilities, plantations and other similar direct investments. These enterprises are almost without exception more generous to labor and more scrupulous in complying with laws and social responsibilities than are corresponding businesses controlled by citizens of the foreign country.

European Countries Claim Vested Interest.

BECAUSE OF racial connections, certain European states believe that they have a sort of vested right in the loyalty of South American peoples. Ground which they have lost to us they now desire to regain. Their propaganda today takes varied and subtle forms. By the press, by powerful broadcasting, by lectures and by personal contacts a contrast to our detriment is drawn between their conception of American life, on the one hand, and their idealized conception of European civilization on the other. Ignoring America's enormous cultural contributions, they exaggerate the influence of our material achievements and our economic expansion.

Expropriation in Mexico must then be projected by any thoughtful American against the whole South American environment in which both local and foreign forces are operating to destroy America's normal economic development and our cultural and political prestige. You may be sure that these hostile interests are watching Mexico to discover whereby they can profit at our expense.

The radical press in Latin America has expressed its approval of expropriation in Mexico and in some cases called upon other governments to follow the Mexican "example." Agitators have, under the enthusiasm inspired by the Mexican case, urged upon the masses nationalization of foreign-owned enterprises. President Cardenas has called upon the people of Latin America in a broadcast to adopt the Mexican nationalization policy.

Such appeals give encouragement to tendencies already in existence in Latin America. Today legislation of one kind or another restricting private acquisition and exploitation of subsoil resources exists in Bolivia, Argentina, Venezuela, Colombia and Peru, as well as in Mexico. In most cases laws apply specifically to petroleum. Parallel to these laws are mining laws pertaining to the title to resources, granting of concessions and methods of exploitation. The draft in several countries is toward nationalization—Brazil and Cuba have only this year adopted new legislation of this general type.

Prosperity Depends On Orderly Finances.

IT IS ELEMENTAL in world economics that prosperity comes to both debtor and creditor countries as the result of orderly financial transactions between them. To make generalizations about "exploitation" as a broad indictment of capital investments by the citizens of one country in the resources of another, misses entirely the fundamental principles of economic prosperity in the modern world. Moreover, expropriation destroys the basis of economic cooperation within the Americas.

It is not easy to convince the American citizen who is not directly affected by expropriation in Mexico that he has an indirect interest and that that indirect interest is very real. Those who doubt will be convinced if they will review the cases and study the principles involved. It is easily proved that the well-being of the American people now depends in a very decisive way upon the orderly flow of capital from the United States as a creditor country to countries which are undeveloped economically, particularly Latin America.

No attitude is more unsound than that which encourages timidity in defending American interests abroad. Firmness in diplomacy is not inconsistent with good-neighborliness and sometimes is the only way to secure respect. If we are meeting our responsibilities as American citizens, we are interested in the regulation of disputes across frontiers by orderly procedure and law, just as we are interested in having justice done through the machinery of government at home. We might even put aside the merits of expropriation in Mexico and still disapprove it because of method. Nations cannot live as good neighbors and as members of a co-operating community of states if they do not recognize in their dealings, one with another, the minimum principles of international law.

The interest of the American citizen joins with the interest of the citizens of all the American republics in a desire to establish a working basis of international justice and co-operation. This might well be a major subject of discussion at the Conference of American States which will meet at Lima next December.

Notable Novel

By Lewis Gannett.

And The Mark Twain Debate.

A RARELY faithful picture of a child's mind marks Kathryn Hulme's "We Lived as Children" (Knopf, $2.50). And a rare picture of San Francisco in earthquake days—Miss Hulme does not call it a mere "fire."

"It was a wonderful life, the rebuilding of San Francisco," says the tomboy heroine of this satisfying story. She and her brother, Buzz, had fragments in their bodies from every building going up within a radius of ten blocks. They chewed the black tar used for roofing; they learned to halve bricks with one blow of the trowel; they stole wood from dozens of structures, and Mother took out the splinters every night with a sterilized needle.

Mother was a gallant grass widow—perhaps just a shade too gallant. She was always expecting Father to get tired of his latest inamorata and come home. Father is the life of the book, as he was the life of his factory, of his ranch, of every party he ever attended. There was electricity in the air, just in waiting for Father—even when you knew that he probably wouldn't keep his appointments. Things were always happening around Father; and there was a magnificent mystery about the status of his love affairs. Father married pretty often, but there were always intermediate excitements.

Miss Hulme, San Francisco-born herself at a date which fits precisely into the picture, writes well. She never steps out of the role of her child narrator; she catches the incomparable ecstasies of a child's joys and agonies. The children in the family loved Father, but they sided with Mother every time. They were caught by the magnetism of Father's Nell Borah, who was "beautiful like a dynamo," but they prayed that Father's second wife would die so that he would come home to stay. They never knew that he never would, that the fat lady downstairs was right when she told Mother that she was a fine figger of a woman still and should quit waiting patiently. The lady downstairs was instinctively a man's woman; Mother wasn't.

The picture of the cave in the sand lot under the lupine roots, of the rattlesnake den on the ranch, of Father's various lady friends and of grandmother (who didn't believe in soup before turkey, because it merely spoiled the appetite for a good dish) are exquisitely done. Slight as it is; "We Lived as Children" is one of the notable novels of the year.

BAITING Van Wyck Brooks—who, in his "Ordeal of Mark Twain," first published in 1920, suggested that the author of "Huckleberry Finn" had permitted his nice Elmira wife to shear his Western locks and tame his wild artistic freedom—is becoming one of the most popular of indoor sports. Bernard de Voto did it at length in his "Mark Twain's America." Max Eastman, who grew up in Mark Twain's wife's home town, played at it in a recent article in Harper's, probably a chapter from Mr. Eastman's forthcoming autobiography. De Lancey Ferguson continues the game in the belated spring issue of that lively bookman's quarterly, The Colophon (Pynson Press, $2.50).

The real debate, Mr. Ferguson holds, hangs on the questions what Mark Twain deleted from the early drafts of "Huck," and why. A large part of the original manuscript has lain neglected for 50 years in the Buffalo Public Library. Mr. Ferguson has conscientiously checked it through; as a result he exonerates Olivia. Mark's changes, as he sees it, were all for the best, and they were not Nice-Nellying. His evidence is, in the main, convincing.

Mark Twain edited his manuscript, as any conscientious craftsman would. Only a few changes are prissy; and there is no evidence that those are due to Olivia's influence. He did somewhat consider the feelings of the churchly. In the "Royal Nonesuch" the King, as the story is printed, is rigged out in his store clothes looking as if "he had walked right out of the Ark;" in the original version he walked out of the Bible instead of the Ark. Tom's jibe, "mild as goose milk," was first written as "mild as Sunday school;" Mark Twain changed that. The King kisses Mary Jane less and with less fervor in the final than in the original version, and the Duke's denunciation of the King omits one noble string of epithets; the Duke called the King an "unsatisfiable, tunnel-bellied old sewer," and this was dropped in print. But that isn't much upon which to base an indictment of Olivia.

Van Wyck Brooks, however, might well retort that Olivia had exerted her softening influence upon her husband before he sat down, pen in hand, to write his first draft of "Huckleberry Finn." She had had a dozen years of marriage in which to work . . . And so the debate may continue merrily, as long as critics enjoy such pastimes. Perhaps Mark, like Olivia, was a little influenced by his age. East or West. One of the greatest discoveries of the young writers of today is the fact that the early Victorians were almost as tough-minded and as lush-tongued as the Elizabethans; what our generation calls "Victorian" is really no more than late Victorian. The good Queen reigned a long time, and it took several decades for her influence to reach Hartford, Conn., and Elmira, N. Y., and still more for it to prettify Carson City, Nev. Virginia City isn't even yet quite what Her Majesty would have liked.

* * * *

THE BIBLIOPHILE contributors to The Colophon have a pleasant way of learnedly destroying cherished traditions. Carroll A. Wilson in the winter issue proved the lack of authority for the remark Daniel Webster is supposed to have made about Dartmouth College, "it is a small college, but there are those who love it." In this issue Mr. Wilson sets out to prove that no one ever heard James A. Garfield make the remark so universally attributed to him. "The ideal college is Mark Hopkins on one end of a log and a student on the other." Back in 1871 Garfield, not yet President of the United States, paid a tribute to the great president of Williams College, but, so far as any ear-witness evidence goes, the nearest he ever came to making his most famous remark was to say that a log cabin in the center of Ohio, with Mark Hopkins on one end of a pine bench and a student on the other, was a good enough university for any man. Probably John James Ingalls, Senator from Kansas, a Williams graduate and a famous Chautauqua orator, gave this the form now so familiar and put it into Garfield's mouth.

Plenty of familiar quotations are due to other men than their authors. Mr. Williams cites an amusing list. "Casey at the Bat," written by Ernest Lawrence Thayer for The San Francisco Examiner in 1881, owes all its fame to De Wolf Hopper. It never again appeared in print until 1901; by then it was Hopper's poem.

The neatest trick of this issue of The Colophon is to demolish, in less than half a page, The Saturday Evening Post's claim to have been founded by Benjamin Franklin.

Labor Official Scores Ford in St. Louis Case

192 Men Ordered Rehired; Company Takes Rouge Fight to High Court.

By the United Press.

The conflict between the National Labor Relations Board and Henry Ford, the Nation's No. 1 "individualist" and persistent foe of New Deal labor legislation, moved forward on two fronts yesterday.

NLRB Trial Examiner Tilford E. Dudley ruled that the company had violated the Wagner act at its St. Louis assembly plant and recommended reinstatement of 192 employes and back pay for 96 of them. He also directed the company to grant exclusive bargaining rights for its 837 production employes at St. Louis to the United Automobile Workers of America, a Committee for Industrial Organization affiliate. It was the first time that a union was accorded majority status in a Ford plant.

Violations Are Listed.

A few hours later Frederick H. Wood, Ford attorney, appealed to the Supreme Court from a Sixth Circuit Court decree permitting the NLRB to set aside an earlier decision that the company had violated the labor relations statute at its Dearborn and Highland Park, Mich., plants.

Dudley held that the company violated the Wagner act in these ways:

"By its failure to disavow anti-union announcements attributed to it in the public press and read by its employes.

"By distributing to its employes at the plant certain anti-union literature.

"By allowing its foremen and assistant foremen to request employes' signatures upon certain anti-union statements expressing 'satisfaction' with respondent and by considering such signatures as an important factor in selecting employes to be reinstated.

"By denying to its employes the right to wear union buttons in respondent's (Ford's) plant.

Refused to Bargain.

"By interrogating its employes individually regarding their affiliations and preferences as to labor organizations.

"By dominating and interfering with the labor organization known as the Liberty Legion of America, Inc., and the St. Louis division thereof, and by contributing support to it.

"By discharging and/or failing and refusing to reinstate or re-employ certain employes . . . and thus discouraging membership in . . . the U. A. W.

"By refusing to bargain collectively with . . . the U. A. W. as exclusive representative of the respondent's employes in respect to grievances, labor disputes and other conditions of work.

"By interfering with, restraining and coercing its employes in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in section 7 of the act."

68 Per Cent Favor Union.

Dudley said a comparison of U. A. W. membership cards and petitions disclosed that the union represented 68 per cent of the 837 workers in the appropriate bargaining unit even after he had excluded 206 signatures because the men "were not members of the U. A. W. in good standing in November of 1937, . . . but instead signed application cards and paid their fees because of duress."

In the case appealed to the Supreme Court a technical interpretation of the Wagner act is at issue. The company contends that since the board once asked for enforcement order of the River Rouge decision, it cannot then reopen the case for further proceedings to comply with the Supreme Court's opinion in the Kansas City stockyards rate case.

In the Rouge plant, which employs 90,000 workmen, the U. A. W. did not claim a majority of the workers. The NLRB ordered the company to reinstate 29 discharged U. A. W. members and to cease other alleged anti-union activities.

Ford attorneys denied in the St. Louis case that the company had refused to bargain with the U. A. W. or had discriminated against union members. The company contended that 23 of the discharged workers were inefficient and that it had refused to re-employ 61 others because they were guilty of "unlawful and wrongful acts of violent conduct."

The company was directed to disestablish the Liberty Legion of America, Inc., as a bargaining agency and to refuse to negotiate with it.

Regarding his finding that Henry Ford's interviews, in which he said he never would recognize the U. A. W. or any other union, and distribution of "Fordisms" in the plant, Dudley said:

"The newspaper statements attributed to Henry Ford go far beyond the expression of opinion. They constitute an expression of intent to violate the law, regardless of consequences."

Tax for Jobless Called Too High

Boston, July 7 (AP).—The Smaller Business Association of New England today appealed to President Roosevelt for a 1 per cent reduction in the 3 per cent unemployment compensation tax now levied upon employers.

The association declared it felt "rates thus far assessed have been on an estimated basis which seems to be providing a larger sum than is necessary for current payments and a proper reserve."

Labor Board Certifies Vote of Firm Workers

A vote by employes of the American Oil Co., of South Washington and Rosslyn, Va., to allow the Oil Workers International Union, Local No. 403, to act as exclusive collective bargaining representative for workers was certified yesterday by the National Labor Relations Board.

The vote does not affect clerical and supervisory employes and oil dispatchers.

The Federal Diary

Celebrating the first birthday anniversary of the union, the District Council of U. F. W. A. has planned a picnic Sunday in Rock Creek Park.

Even more momentous than the picnic is the baseball game scheduled to accompany it. For at 2 p. m. the U. F. W. A. sluggers, who are affiliated with the C. I. O., even when they play baseball, are going to meet the nine from the Retail Clerks' Union, A. F. of L. affiliate.

This is, we are told, the second time in Washington that C. I. O. has met A. F. of L. on the diamond. The first time the game had to be stopped in the third inning (not because of a riot, however!)

We respectfully suggest that Mme. Secretary Perkins referee Sunday's game.

Six veteran employes were retired last month from the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. Their combined service totals more than 166 years, or an average of nearly 28 years apiece.

Oldest of all in point of service was William H. Lowder, distributor of material and collector of printed work, who has been employed in the Government more than 39 years. A veteran of 36 years' service is Robert B. Taylor, spreader. Mary Guckert, rotary perforator, has 31 years to her credit, and Louis F. Bohne, jr., prover, 29 years. Mrs. Anna J. Joy, examiner, had served 16 years, and William Terrell 2d, press helper, 15 years.

In the latest list of Government publications, sandwiched in between such esoteric subjects as "Screw-worm Control" and "Reference Tables for Iron-Constantan and Copper-Constantan Thermocouples," we observed one title of direct interest to Washingtonians: "American dog tick, Eastern carrier of Rocky Mountain spotted fever." A few cases of spotted fever and one death have occurred here this year.

American dog ticks and Mediterranean fruit flies don't have very much in common, but anyway—

Two employes of the Department of Agriculture, Ben H. Thibodeaux, of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, and Bernard Connor, of the Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine, have been appointed by Secretary Wallace to the Mediterranean fruit and fly board.

The board will investigate losses sustained by Florida farmers as a result of the campaign to eradicate the Mediterranean fruit fly.

Chairman of the board is James W. Morton, one of the leading farmers in Georgia. Other members are two Floridians, Arthur Porcher and Dr. J. E. Crump. The board will hold its first conference here tomorrow.

Continuing the series of meetings held to elucidate the executive orders, the U. F. W. A. is sponsoring a talk by President Harry B. Mitchell of the Civil Service Commission at 8 tonight at U. F. W. A. national headquarters, 532 Seventeenth street northwest, to be given for special benefit of employes of the Railroad Retirement Board. T. A. McNamara, chief of personnel of the board, and Miss Eleanor Nelson, U. F. W. A. secretary-treasurer, will also speak.

One question that will doubtless arise is, "What will the effect of the orders be on a brand-new agency, the Bureau of Unemployment Insurance?"

In answer to the letter of Henry G. Nolda, of Federal Employes Union No. 2, N. F. F. E., claiming that a "united front" has already been partially established among some Federal employe unions, Harry G. Ritner, of the Washington Federal Bulletin, replies:

"Take a peep at this:

"'Charles I. Stengle, A. F. G. E. 'I do not believe there exists today any single man who can carry on all the duties of the civil service administrator.' (Reorganization hearings).

"'Luther C. Steward, N. F. F. E. 'We approve the idea of the single administrator with the detailed functions as set forth in section 202.' (Reorganization hearings).

"'Jacob Baker, U. F. W. A.—'Of the opinion that the commission may be continued as is or with a single administrator.' (Copy of letter in Congressional Record)."

Mr. Ritner asks, "When will the several unions formulate plans to etsablish a sort of clearing house for the legislative representatives of all the unions who would get together and submit to the Congress a distinct uniform platform? Not until this takes places may the employe expect any improvement . . .

"The union loudly claiming credit for restoration of pay is actually the union mainly responsible for the pay cut in the first instance. Many will remember the words which made pay cuts possible and the person who made such utterances as 'It is a patriotic duty to accept a pay cut,' . . . Most responsible for pay restoration was the Legislature itself. By ordering pay restoration, the pay of legislators was also boosted."

A typographical error in this column yesterday obscured two facts: 1. That it was the U. F. W. A. which has just issued a valuable resume of the executive orders of June 24; and 2. that the list of agencies which the U. F. W. A. says are "clearly affected" by the orders is almost identical with that published by the A. F. G. E.

Army, Navy Put Limits on Fliers' Role in Contests

Under a "new and rigid policy" Army and Navy aviators will participate hereafter in only two or three national air meets or industrial exhibitions annually, the War Department decided yesterday.

Although the Army Air Corps will take part in the National Air Races at Cleveland September 3 to September 5, the air meets attended will be changed from year to year with the result that Cleveland will be excluded next year, Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson said.

"Both the Army and the Navy have been faced with a close distinction between their desire to demonstrate to the public their progress in flying and in equipment, and the loss of training and appropriated funds demanded by indiscriminate participation in air meets and exhibitions," he explained.

Playground Programs Now Fully Under Way

Full programs now are under way on four new playgrounds, open from 9 a. m. until 7 p. m. under experienced playground directors, Miss Sibyl Baker, supervisor, announced yesterday.

These playgrounds are Edgewood, Third and Evarts streets northeast; Hearst, Thirty-seventh and Wilden streets northwest; Langdon Park, Mills avenue and Franklin street northeast, and Turkey Thicket, Michigan avenue and Tenth street northeast.

Session to Give District a Flag Called by Hazen

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen yesterday started the ball rolling to give the District an official flag.

As provided by Congress, a Flag Commission, including Secretary of War H. H. Woodring, Secretary of Navy Claude A. Swanson and Hazen was authorized to design a permanent flag for the District.

Yesterday Hazen wrote to his committeemen and asked for an early meeting to discuss means for selecting a design.

Nation's No. 1 Problem
President Roosevelt has called the South the Nation's number one problem. To Christine Sadler, Post Staff Write, the South has long been a pet subject. Following the recent conference on Southern economic conditions, Miss Sadler has written a special article on the South of today—in which she discusses the political significance, if any, behind the President's move to rehabilitate the South . . . about conditions as they exist in the South today . . . about absentee ownership . . . about the potentialities of the South. You'll find her article very interesting—

Variety Clubs Again Sponsor Atlantic City Beauty Pageant

Will Have Summer Headquarters for Barkers at the Hotel Traymore; Frescott Subs for Stage Pal; Johnny Perkins Coming Back; Notes of the Theater.

THESE Variety Club barkers certainly do get about and, now and again, some of them drop into what are technically known as "nice spots." I have in mind the national organization of 19 Tents and not merely Washington's Local Tent, No. 11.

BELL.

Take the case of George D. Tyson, for example. Mr. Tyson is a member of the board of directors of the parent Pittsburgh No. 1 Tent and has belonged to National President Johnny Harris' original club since 1928. That is by way of being ten years and Mr. Tyson now is reaping the reward of his faithfulness.

Under date of July 5, he writes from Atlantic City, N. J., on the letterhead of the "Showmen's Variety Jubilee," which features the selection of "Miss America" each September, that he is summering at the shore in the capacity of executive director of the annual pageant, and that provision is being made to make seashore trips pleasant this summer for other Varieteers.

"We are figuring on opening a national summer headquarters at the Hotel Traymore here for all members of Variety clubs," says Mr. Tyson. "It will be a place which barkers who come to Atlantic City can use as club headquarters, for bathing facilities, etc. If you are contemplating coming to Atlantic City this summer, by all means look me up at my office or through the Variety Club headquarters in the Traymore."

Thank you, Mr. Tyson, your prescription has a pleasant odor.

* * * *

But that wasn't the prime purpose of Mr. Tyson's letter. In writing it, he was more than anything else doing a good turn for a fellow-barker, one Norman Frescott. Mr. Frescott, the well-known mentalist and master of legerdemain, it seems, is a charter member of the Pittsburgh Variety Club and has served as master of ceremonies and toastmaster at all nine of the annual banquets held by Tent No. 1 since its organization. He has been a visitor at all of the 19 Variety Club Tents scattered over the country and is further known from coast to coast by reason of his many tours in vaudeville. And now we are beginning to get to it. In the old vaudeville days, one of Norman Frescott's closest friends was Fred Allen. That is how it comes about that Mr. Frescott is pinch-hitting for Mr. Allen on radio's "Town Hall Tonight" program, his first appearance in the substitute role having been on Wednesday night of this week.

* * * *

And that reminds me. A week from today there will return to F street one of Washington's favorite masters of ceremonies, who really deserves to be known as the "Great-Something-or-Other," if avoirdupois has anything to do with it. That would be Johnny Perkins, the "ton of fun," who is booked to make his annual appearance at Loew's Capitol Theater the week of the fifteenth.

* * * *

Just as we were beginning to fret about it, Sabbath deadlines being what they are, the information got afoot that the opening of Impresario Stephen E. Cochran's Olney Theater project has been deferred from next Monday night, July 11, to a fortnight hence, Monday night, July 25.

The opening attraction will be "The Lady Has a Heart," starring Elissa Landi, a talented decoration of both stage and screen. For the week of August 1, Irene Purcell will be the guest star in "Tonight at 8:30," and the following week Florence Reed will be seen in "Yes, My Darling Daughter." The week of August 15 is being held open for the production of an unannounced new play. For the week of August 22, Eugenie Leontovitch will come to the Olney in "Tovarich."

So the wheels are beginning to turn, praise be!

* * * *

And if you are particularly interested in the summer theaters, no matter where they are, Owen D. Young, director of the General Electric Co. and a member of the board of regents of the University of the State of New York, will make the principal address at the inauguration of the fourth Mohawk Drama Festival, at Union College, Schenectady, N. Y., next Tuesday night, when the comedy, "David Harum," will be presented before a distinguished audience.

In an earlier ceremonial on this Sunday night, the speaker will be Elliot Norton, drama critic of the Boston Post.

* * * *

The opening today of "Having Wonderful Time," costarring Ginger Rogers and Douglas Fairbanks, jr., at RKO-Keith's, has recalled to the mind of some thoughtful publicists that every vehicle in which Ginger Rogers has played for RKO-Radio has made a playdate at the showplace of the world, Radio City Music Hall, in New York. With the opening there last night of "Having Wonderful Time," Ginger enjoys the distinction of having been on the Music Hall screen twice within a period of 30 days. Her previous starring picture was "Vivacious Lady," in which she costarred with James Stewart and which completed its run at the Radio City house as recently as June 15.

Mr. Stewart, incidentally, keeps pretty good step with Miss Rogers. He is costarred with Margaret Sullavan in "The Shopworn Angel," also opening today, at Loew's Palace.

* * * *

Then there is that fellow Sam Levene, who scored such an overwhelming success in "Three Men on a Horse," on the stage. Mr. Levene also is in "Shopworn Angel" and has just been signed by RKO-Radio for an important part with Barbara Stanwyck and Henry Fonda in "The Mad Miss Manton," which will go into immediate production. To accept this part, Levene had to withdraw from the role of Gordon Miller in the New York production of "Room Service," the part Groucho Marx now is playing in the RKO screen version of the stage comedy.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

HEDDA HOPPER

You wouldn't believe anyone could be so enthusiastic. The highlight of his visit was their first view of some Cocker Spaniel puppies They'd never seen a live animal before. They stood staring at these strange creatures. And all of a sudden Marie, the littlest one, made a dash down the steps and had one of them cuddled in her arms. Two of them never seemed to warm up to the puppies at all, their other toys being more important.

How they adored Jean. So do we. And little did we think he'd reach his greatest fame through quints—not his own.

Every day during the making of the picture was like Christmas. The Dionne five ordinarily have very few toys. But when you see "Five of a Kind" you'll think you're in a toyshop. Teddy bears, hobby horses and miniature grand pianos. And the thing that killed them was a microphone. Yvonne took it completely over—couldn't be pried loose from it. She'll probably grow up to be a crooner.

In a dance sequence, for which four of them had been especially trained—the other didn't seem to be able to get the steps, so just let her wander around at will—they reckoned without a knowledge of femininity. She picked up her skirts, twirled like a peacock—and stole the show!

They're getting a bit tired of milk. While four of them were being dressed, time hung heavy on the hands of the fifth. Five glasses of milk on the table—and five red hair bows on the window sill, gave her an idea. When they came to drink the milk they found a bow plopped in each glass. Naturally, the nurses accused the one who did it. But her four sisters spoke up as one: "No, we did it." They stick together like Hollywood yes-men.

Their sense of neatness and cleanliness has been so ingrained it spoiled a take. A property man put a face in while chalk on Jean's back—they hadn't seen it. When he turned around, they expected the quints would laugh. Not at all. They ran to him and tried to rub it off, saying, "Poor Dr. Luke"—only they call him "Loot." They're right, they certainly get enough of it.

Papa Dionne is doing all right, too. Gets $300 a month from their estate and has between $40,000 and $50,000. But still no bathroom or other fancy plumbing in his house. He has 12 salesgirls on his staff who sell knickknacks of the quints—souvenirs which might be found in any 5-and10-cent store. And autographed pictures for 25 cents apiece. Not bad for an accident, is it?

Being wards of the crown, visitors are allowed to look at them free, through glass and screens, but the quints can't see them. On bad days about 2,000 come. Good ones draw 7,000. Almost as profitable as the crown jewels in the Tower of London. Only there they charge a shilling—25 cents to you. Worth it.

2 G.O.P. Slates Appear Certain In Montgomery

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post, 9213 Clark Ave., Silver Spring, Md. Telephone Shepherd 4200.

Montgomery County Republicans who have been enjoying the factional strife in the Democratic Party in the county apparently are going to find that "what's sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander."

Following filing yesterday of a slate of candidates for members of the Republican State Central Committee for the county with the board of election supervisors by Paul Sleman, Chevy Chase, leader of one faction of the Republican Party in the county, it became apparent that a similar slate is being planned by the Judge Harold C. Smith-Mrs. Clara Holmes faction, thus insuring a primary election.

Sleman is supported by many of the Suburban Republicans, while the Smith-Holmes faction is strongest in the upper end of the county. The Sleman followers declared for a straight Republican ticket, while the Smith-Holmes group casts its fortunes with a continuation of the Fusion Party.

With the dissolution of the Fusion Party, the Sleman group has gained added prestige, but the Smith-Holmes clan has the ear of the titular leader of the party in the State, Gov. Harry W. Nice.

Sleman's ticket, filed yesterday, includes Robert L. McKeever, of Silver Spring; Earl W. Shinn, of Bethesda; James Cunningham Rogers, of Chevy Chase; Walter W. Dawson, of Rockville, former chairman of the central committee, who resigned in the heat of the Fusion Party clash recently, and Nathan Duvall, colored, of Gaithersburg.

Significant is the absence of Simon O. Smith, colored, Gaithersburg leader, who has been a member of the central committee for many years. Smith is said to have fought mightily for the Fusion compact. He is chief janitor at the county courthouse in Rockville.

Louis Proctor, of Takoma Park, also has filed for a member of the central committee, completing the ticket of six.

Mrs. Holmes indicated yesterday that she would be prepared to file a slate of central committee candidates within a few days.

Wilson L. Townsend, Kensington resident, who conducts a law practice in Washington, filed for the Republican nomination for judge of the circuit court. Townsend's candidacy has been accepted as a fact for some time. He is well liked and probably will be a formidable candidate.

Rumors that Judge Thomas M. Anderson, of the County Juvenile Court, will file for the Circuit Court nomination on the Republican ticket appear unfounded. It is more probable that he will file for the office of state's attorney, political observers declare.

Ward W. Caddington, commanding officer of the Service Company, First Infantry, Maryland National Guard, of Silver Spring, and long in the public eye in the Democratic Party, yesterday filed his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for county commissioner from Silver Spring District. He files as an independent without indorsement of any particular faction of the party. O. W. Roby, of Fairland, who has the Democratic organization support, already has filed his candidacy.

Judge Herman C. Heffner, Republican, new judge of the Takoma Park Police Court, also has filed for the Republican nomination for the same post, which now is held by County Commissioner Paul M. Coughlan.

Leslie Sabine, of Laytonsville also has filed for the Democratic nomination for county commissioner of his district. Dulaney Hunter and Stephen Fuller have filed their candidacies in the Democratic primaries as members of the tax reduction faction.

It is expected that filing of candidates will begin with increasing regularity in the next few days as the battle lines of both parties are drawn.

Republicans expect to effect a slate at a meeting to be held Monday at the home of F. Barnard Welsh, Rockville attorney, at which time a move for harmony between the warring factions of the party is expected to be made.

Officers were installed at a luncheon meeting of the Rockville Rotary Club yesterday at the Hungerford Tavern in Rockville. Those who assumed their new offices were: Harry Hoskinson, president; Adolph Gude, vice president; W. H. Winkler, secretary; B. J. Lanier, treasurer; Richard Green and Dr. W. A. Linthicum, directors.

County Commissioner Richard H. Lansdale gave a short talk on the milling business, in which he is engaged, as a feature of a series of occupational talks.

Committees were announced as follows: Club service—B. N. Allnutt, chairman, Thomas C. Kelley, John McDonald, O. W. Anderson and Henry Ransom; classification and membership—Edgar Reed, chairman, Albert M. Bouic, Dr. W. A. Linthicum, Adolph Gude and Eugene Casey; attendance—William Winkler, chairman, Dr. Linthicum and Lewis Reed; boys work—Loren Schott, chairman, John Henderson and Robert Peter; student loan—Judge Charles W. Woodward, chairman, Dr. E. E. Broome, Judge Harold C. Smith; international—William F. Prettyman, Josiah W. Jones and Douglas M. Blandford.

Law Change Urged.

Constitutional amendment to provide an eight-year term for the State's attorney for Montgomery County and also to increase the pay of that office to $5,000 a year was urged in a resolution adopted by the Montgomery County Policemen's Association. The present term is four years, with a $3,000 salary.

Declaring that the resolution does not in any way reflect on the present incumbent, or any previous State's attorney, the policemen said that their resolution is intended to make the office of prosecutor attractive to mature lawyers who will be able to cope with the well practiced criminal lawyers, instead of making it a stepping stone for young lawyers just out of school. It further urged that the duties of the State's attorney be confined entirely to criminal prosecution.

A benefit baseball game between the police and a team of Bethesda Volunteer Fire Department will be played July 23 at 3 p. m., at Corby's Field, corner of Garrett Park road and Rockville pike. Walter Johnson and Sam Rice have been invited to serve as umpires. The proceeds are for the death benefit fund of the police association.

Candidates to Speak.

Women candidates for various offices on the Democratic ticket will feature a meeting of the Women's Democratic Organization Club of Takoma Park, Md., Tuesday at 8 p. m. in Takoma Firehall, Carroll and Denwood avenues.

Miss Ruth Shoemaker, a candidate for re-election to the Maryland House of Delegates; Mrs. Charles Roach and Miss Laura Gilliland, who are running for election of the State central committee, will be on the program.

Mrs. Alice Lyddane, president of the club, has extended an invitation to Mrs. Ralph O. Wells, president of the Silver Spring Women's Democratic Club and its members to attend the meeting.

A reception and refreshments will follow the meeting.

A hearing on the application of Indian Spring Tavern, Inc., at Four Corners, Md., for a Class D beer license to sell beer and light wine will be held at the Liquor Control Board Building Monday at 2 p. m. The corporation is composed of Walter H. and Annie May Dickhaut and H. C. Peacock.

Hydrangeas are plentiful in the yard of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin C. Bagot, 403 South Fairfax street, Alexandria. The home was built in 1816 by Mr. Bagot's great-great-grandfather and has been occupied continuously by the Bagot family. The children shown are John and Lawrence Hanrahan, grandsons of Mr. and Mrs. Bagot. They represent the seventh generation to occuy the house, which is of the rare "flounder" type.

Burson Cleared Of Wrong Intent In Park Contract

Richmond, July 7 (AP).—The State Conservation Commission today reprimanded R. E. Burson, its director of State parks, for "negligence" and "lax practice" in contracting for a $5,500 electric power line in Douthat State Park, but cleared him "of any intentional wrongdoing."

In a seven-page statement issued by Chairman Wilbur Hall late today, the commission reviewed the report of State Auditor McCarthy Downs that Burson did not advertise for bids on the line, and that Richardson-Wayland Electric Corporation, of Roanoke, received payment before the job was completed in 1936.

Downs said Burson's failure to ask more than three bids and to require the low bidder to post bond was a violation of the State code.

Knox Cleared In Falls Church Police Killing

Charge Dropped Following Acquittal of Scheid in Daugherty Death.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST, Clarendon, Va., Tel. OXford 0509.

Herbert Knox, suspended Falls Church policeman indicted for aiding and abetting in the murder of Theodore Daugherty March 20, was cleared yesterday when Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas nolle prossed the case.

Edwin Scheid, also suspended, indicted for the murder, was found not guilty in Arlington Circuit Court last Friday.

The Vacation Bible School at Arlington Presbyterian Church will hold an open session for parents today at 10:30 a. m. The program will be in charge of Mrs. Walter F. Wolf, principal.

An open session for the parents will be held tonight at 7 o'clock at the Cherrydale Methodist Church with Mrs. M. P. Ayers, principal in charge. At the same hour there will be an open session at the school at the Clarendon Baptist Church. Mrs. Merle Foster, principal, will be in charge.

Roosevelt Signs D. C. Children's Free Lunch Bill

WPA and Other Funds to Provide for Needy for 12 Months.

President Roosevelt yesterday paved the way for the inauguration Monday of free lunches to 5,200 needy school children of the District who will be served at the city's playgrounds throughout the summer recess.

The President approved a WPA project making available $169,995 in Federal funds, which will be supplemented by $65,000 by the District for a 12-month program to feed "necessitous school children."

Although it was previously explained that needy children who did not attend school last semester but who would attain school age this summer, would not be fed, this point was cleared up yesterday by WPA Deputy Administrator Otto Cass who stated children who have reached the school age and "who are necessitous" will receive free lunches.

Cass said 200 women who were furloughed July 1, when the project seemed hopelessly entwined in red tape, have returned to work. They will work at the Wisconsin avenue kitchen where all food is prepared.

Approximately 1,000 school children who are eligible to receive free lunches will be sent to various camps this summer through the Police Boys Clubs and private charities, Cass said. However, their number will be made up by the estimated 1,000 needy children who will enter school this fall, but who will be served lunches this summer.

Lunch plates will include fruits, sandwiches and cold milk.

Acting City Manager Carl L. Budwesky said yesterday plans for the proposed elementary school to be built on Cameron Mills road, between Jefferson Park and Beverley Hills, have not been received from the office of State Architect Raymond V. Long, and when received copies will be submitted to the WPA in order to get approval in connection with the grant of $67,000 authorized by the PWA.

Bids will be asked and every effort made to start work this summer, the new building and land will cost approximately $150,000.

Councilmen have been holding meetings to consider the long list of applications for the position of city manager, vacant since February, owing to the sudden death of City Manager E. C. Dunn. City Attorney Budwesky has been in charge of the office. Mayor Richard L. Ruffner has been authorized to write to 12 applicants on the eligible list to arrange for personal interviews before making a selection.

William E. Dodd, jr., candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress from the Eighth Congressional District of Virginia opposing Representative Howard W. Smith, was a guest at the Alexandria Young Democrats Club last night. Clyde C. Lamond, jr., president, was in charge.

Representative Smith and Dodd both were invited to attend the meeting. Smith was out of town. He is a member of the local club.

The principal business was final arrangements for the district convention, to be held in Alexandria tomorrow, presided over by James C. King, of Fairfax, district chairman.

The funeral of Collin W. Omeara, 66, who died Tuesday at his home at 317 south Washington street, was held yesterday morning at the home, conducted by Dr. William B. McIlwaine, pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church. Burial was in the Presbyterian Cemetery. Naval Academy Work Includes $1,250,000 for Officers' Homes

Chapel Enlargement, Hospital Rebuilding, New Dispensary and Laundry Also Planned in Record $3,500,000 Program.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., July 7.—Plans were laid at the Naval Academy today for the expenditure of about $3,500,000 on new buildings and the replacement of existing structures, the largest construction program since the institution was rebuilt during the 1904-1908 period.

The plans are being prepared by the Bureau of Yards and Docks of the Navy Department, and the public works office of the Naval Academy, which functions under the department of buildings and grounds, headed by Capt. Charles W. Crosse, U. S. N.

The program provides for enlargement of the academy chapel, 16 multiple apartments for officers, new dispensary and laundry buildings, improvement of the midshipmen mess hall, the rebuilding of the naval hospital, and construction of a central heating plant.

It is expected that the projects will get under way by August 15. Constructiotn will be by private contract, with both WPA and PWA labor employed. The program calls for completion of the work by the summer of 1939.

About $1,250,000 will be expended on the officers' apartments. Ten of these will be build as a unit on the crest of the golf course across from the academy, and six near the neval hospital. They will take the place of 12 small wooden bungalows used since the World War. It was pointed out that at present the academy has 70 quarters to accommodate about 500 officers.

The present northeast and southwest wings of the naval hospital, built of frame during the World War, will be torn down and replaced by brick buildings. The bed capacity of the hospital will be increased from 165 to 250. In addition a new dormitory will be built for the hospital corpsmen, and a subsistence building, containing the diet kitchens, erected.

The complete project will give the academy a modern hospital. Together with all the new buildings, the replacements will be constructed with white brick, in keeping with the architecture of the academy.

The academy chapel, erected when there were 700 midshipmen at the academy, will be enlarged by extending the front out to the present step line, the building shape being changed from a Maltese cross to a Roman cross. The seating capacity will be raised from 1,500 to 2,000.

A new three-story laundry building will be erected in the rear of the present powerhouse, utilizing an abandoned wing of the power plant. When completed, the laundry will be moved from Bancroft Hall, the space vacated being used for dental offices and sick quarters. The shift of these offices will give space for additional midshipmen's rooms in Bancroft Hall.

A two-story dispensary building will be erected near the officers' club, in the rear of the new Navy Museum, which is under construction. The present display in the basement of Mahan Hall will be abandoned. The museum building, not a part of the present program, is being constructed at a cost of $170,000, through gifts from the Navy Athletic Association and the Naval Institute.

The midshipmen's mess hall, in the basement of Bancroft Hall, will be remodeled at a cost of about $250,000. The present mess hall was originally designed for use as a laundry and a commissary storeroom.

The plans call for the elimination of about 40 roof supporting pillars, and the remodeling of the roof to give more light and ventilation. The room will be sound-proofed.

A central heating plant will be constructed in the present academy garden, near the baseball grounds, to heat the new apartments and the postgraduate school.

Salisbury, Md., July 7 (AP).—The complaints of two colored men who charged they held "winning combinations" and were not paid were credited tonight with leading to the liquidation of a "numbers racket" on the lower Eastern Shore.

Tonight they awaited sentencing, which was reserved indefinitely by Magistrate W. R. Conway, who presided at trial of the five.

Dodd Selects Anderson for CampaignHead

Cummins' Aide Allowed Leave; Candidate Assails Smith.

Robert N. Anderson, of Arlington County, a special assistant to the United States Attorney General, yesterday assumed charge of the campaign of William E. Dodd, jr., candidate for the Democratic Congressional nomination from the Eighth Virginia District, in opposition to Representative Howard W. Smith. Dodd's headquarters at Alexandria announced Anderson had been granted leave of absence for the duration of the campaign.

A stanch New Dealer, Anderson organized and headed the first Roosevelt for President Club in Virginia in March, 1932. At the 1932 Democratic convention, he refused to join other delegates in a favorite son vote for Senator Harry Flood Byrd. He also took the lead in organizing Young Democratic clubs throughout the country.

In a radio address last night over Station WJSV, Dodd charged Smith had obstructed appropriations for public works in the Eighth District. He said his opponent actively resisted efforts to obtain schools and federally financed utilities.

"When the Nation joined in approving the continuation of the Administration's public works program," he said Smith ". . . raised his voice to shout, 'No, I do not want new schools for my district. I do not want the people of Arlington County to have a sewage disposal system which is as fine as any in the country. I do not want the people of Orange to have a municipal building. I do not want better streets in Alexandria. I do not want waterworks at Herndon. I do not want a new high school at Warrenton. I do not believe the people of Purcellville deserve a library, and I am going to do my utmost to see that they do not get it, even if they want it.'

". . . With the whole Nation joined in a march to recovery, our Congressman joins the Republicans to oppose three out of four PWA programs. Voting with the Republicans, he apparently believes in "Republicanism before recovery."

116 Jobs Given By Agency in Prince Georges

Job placements of Prince Georges County, Md., workers registered with the Maryland State Employment Service totaled 116 during June, it was reported yesterday by E. Claude Gaylor, manager of the Prince Georges, Charles and St. Marys counties district.

Private employment accounted for 43 of the placements, Gaylor said, while public employment, principally the Agricultural Research Center, at Beltsville, Md., and other Government agencies were able to give jobs to 73 persons.

However, during the month 195 new names were added to the list of those seeking employment in the three counties, bringing the total of those registered for employment through June 30 to 3,496. Of these, 2,911 were from Prince Georges County, 416 from Charles County and 169 from St. Mary's County.

Gaylor expressed optimism over the effect PWA projects in the counties would have on unemployment figures.

Assignment to WPA projects does constitute a job placement, Gaylor emphasized, pointing out that some of those registered for jobs and seeking regular work were now on WPA.

Petitions for the paving of six Hyattsville streets were filed last night at a special meeting of the city council, and others are expected within a day or so.

The special council meeting had been set as deadline for reception of petitions from residents on streets who wished to take advantage of a $60,278 Public Works Administration grant to the city. However, some additional petitions received were being checked.

Petitions were received and accepted for the paving of Forest Drive, from Oakwood road to Wine avenue; Carroll avenue, from Wine to University drive and from Garfield avenue to Cecil avenue; Tonner street, from Oakwood to McKinley street; Rheems avenue from Luttrell avenue to Wine; Calvert street, from Arundel avenue to the Riverdale, Md., town line, and Luttrell, from Bayly street to Littlefield street and from Rheems to Bayly.

These streets, however, will not require all of the $135,000 to be spent, of which the $60,278 PWA grant forms 45 per cent, so additional streets may still be added.

Signers of the petitions obligated themselves to pay 55 per cent of the cost of their streets in semi-annual payments over a ten-year period. Without Federal assistance, residents would have to pay the full cost of the work.

The Hyattsville city council last night made formal request of the Maryland State roads commission for permission to install a traffic light at the intersection of Anderson street and the Baltimore boulevard. John L. Clarke, chairman of the council's street light committee, was instructed to obtain estimates on costs, for presentation to the council Monday night.

Dr. Tabler Quits As Md. Road Head

Baltimore, July 7 (AP).—Dr. Homer E. Tabler announced his resignation tonight as chairman of the Maryland State Roads Commission, effective July 15.

His resignation, he said, was "made necessary" because he had been unable to execute a new agreement with a physician to handle his practice.

Gov. Harry W. Nice, told of the resignation at a dinner given by Tabler at the Rolling Road Golf Club here, said he had "reluctantly" accepted.

FBI Theater Unit To Present Play

"The Inspector General," a satire presented by the theater group of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, will be the feature attraction at the fourth festival Tuesday night, at 8 o'clock, in Slyvan Theater. Tickets are available at the Franklin Administration Building, American Automobile Association, and the Washington and Willard hotels.

Participating will be F. G. Lyman, Don Chase, Dan O. Jones, Grant Stettler, Sam Caldwell, W. C. Bowman, Robert Halloway, Masy Volk, Dorothy Lee Jones and Mildred Mussy. Richard Boulger and Robert Youmans will direct the show.

Md. Road Worker Killed As Tractor Turns Over

Lewis Seger, an employe of the Maryland State Roads Commission, was killed yesterday when the tractor he was driving overturned on the Edmonston road at Berwyn, Md., crushing him.

Seger, who lived at Bowie, Md., was said to have been driving the heavy machine on a slope of the road when the accident occurred.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

'Blessed With Above-Average Looks,' Girl Asks How to Develop Personality; Hopes to Be 'Wow.'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am not quite 15. I am blessed with better-than-average looks. In fact, the most beautiful, talented, personable and popular girl I know has told me that I am much prettier than she, and that if only I would "develop" my personality, I could be very popular; or, to use her words, a "wow." I have plenty of girl friends and know plenty of boys, just as friends. That is as it should be, because I have no desire for a "steady beau," but the thing that worries me is that boys always fall for my looks rather than for my personality.

• • • •

Some girls can get along with anyone and manage to be the life of the party wherever they go, while I just sit and feel self-conscious. When boys pay me attention, I never know what to say, and as a result they get one of three impressions of me. One is an impression of "sweet innocence," the type that some boys want to "try out." The second is an impression of haughty coolness. And the third is the impression that I am flattered by their attentions and crazy about them.

• • • •

With boys of the type that are not "fast," I can get along easily. But always I feel the need of more personality. There is a certain boy whom I have worshiped from a distance for over a year. He is very popular and attractive. Other girls far below me in looks have gone after him and now know him well; but I haven't said more than two words to him in my life. He is pleasant and friendly and if I knew how to go about it in the right way, I think we might become good friends. Please tell me how to develop my personality to match my appearance; how to handle all types of persons instead of just certain types; and how to mix in a natural, talkative, unself-conscious way with everyone—that is, if you can make anything out of such a dense presentation of my problem.

K. M. W.

Secret of Personality.

DEAR K. M. W.: That social magnetism which we call personality is based, in most cases, on abundant physical vitality and a high order of intelligence—an intelligence that is intuitively discerning and that seeks continuously to cultivate and extend its powers of perception, understanding and appreciation. Cultivated intelligence implies (in my vocabulary, at least) the exercise—and hence the development—of positive social virtues. Perhaps I can explain what I mean by resorting to quotation. I once heard a woman, past middle life, who possesses "personality" to a marked degree; who is at once so serene and yet so stimulating that everyone with whom she comes in contact seems to borrow, for the moment, some of her exhilarating charm—I once heard her say that the secret of enjoying life, and helping others enjoy it, is to devote some part of every day, consciously to the practice of positive virtues.

• • • •

"But what do you mean, exactly?" I asked. She said: "I mean the positive side of our nature gets so little exercise, as a rule. We need to exercise our capacities for reverence, for appreciation, for good will, for kindliness. There are opportunities at every hand. We can praise (and genuinely appreciate) some good qualities in a friend; some attribute of character; some achievement. We can enjoy some beauty of nature—the sky, the trees, the sunset—and give thanks for their existence. We can give thanks to our Creator that He gives us health, and a home, and family, and opportunities for work and play. We can be glad for a book, or a play, or today's sunshine, or the relief of rain. It means, in a word, looking for, finding and reveling in the happy, rather than the seamy side of life, every day we live."

• • • •

She remarked that too many persons, by inverse technique, develop a negative personality through dwelling on the deplorable aspects of every situation and every individual—finding things to complain of, to regret, to denounce, to criticize, to worry and fret about. Summed up, I suppose, her philosophy amounts to the old adage: "If you bring a smiling visage to the glass, you meet a smile!"

• • • •

Judging from your letter, I should say there is nothing wrong with your personality. You appear to be a trifle on the shy, the reticent, the self-conscious side, but these are characteristic attributes of the well-bred, well-brought-up young girl at the age of 14. Show me a girl of that age who is freely at ease in any company of her contemporaries—who doesn't hesitate in the least to push herself forward; to "go after a boy;" to be "the life of the party"—and I'll show you a girl who is a "show off," or a girl who lacks essential depth and sensitivity, or a girl whose social manner is too highly varnished, too pseudo-sophisticated to be suitable to her years.

• • • •

It is the most natural thing in the world that youngsters at the beginning of adolescence should feel shy, awkward and socially incompetent, in the presence of the opposite sex, and it's the more honest and direct—potentially the more charming—youths and maidens who will both reveal and suffer from this lack of poise; and the more brash, shallow, insufferable—and, in the long run, boring—youngsters who will disport themselves (to their own satisfaction, at least) as dauntless men and women of the world.

• • • •

The best advice I can give you is to stop worrying about "why" boys "fall" (indeed, to stop phrasing their interested reaction, even in your thoughts, as "falling") for you, and to be happy in the fact that they seem to like you for any reason whatever. Once they do make overtures toward friendship, react to them as a civilized person of good will should react to another: pleasantly, appreciatively and intelligently. Interest yourself in the things which interest them; and when their interests have not heretofore been yours, accept the opportunity for finding out, from them, what a certain game, a certain science, a certain book, a certain philosophy, a certain invention, or what-have-you, is all about, insofar as they are able to tell or show you.

• • • •

Personality development, in the best sense, accrues slowly through study and disciplined effort—in the fields of book learning as well as in the fields of outdoor sports (boating, riding, tennis, golf, swimming, etc.) and indoor accomplishments, such as music, dancing, voice, games and so on. The social leader or favorite of a given group, as a rule, is the person who does many things well, and is genuinely modest about his accomplishments; who develops his talents as a sort of civilized obligation to himself and to society, and not for the selfish and egotistic aim of outshining his fellows.

M. H.

Net and Tulle Are Used For Informal Dresses

Paris (U.P.).—Short informal dresses of net and tulle, printed or plain, not only have the advantage of being cool and correct but they are among the most flattering of the summer's dress suggestions. Add to these recommendations the fact that most of the nets do not wrinkle; that a change of slip color will transform the dress, and that the light material takes up less room in a trunk or suitcase than any other fabric.

Bicolor, New Fashion Theme

FOR late summer and early fall you'll want to wear your color in pairs, either in your dress or in your hat and accessories. One of the new ideas stressed at the Paris midseason openings was bicolor, which may mean a combination of black with fuchsia green, blue or any of the numerous shades of pink, or burgundy with navy, or gray with peacock or almost anything you want to try. the black sheer sheath-like dress shown above carries out the bicolor idea in its draping of royal blue acetate jersey. The ostrich trimmed tricorne and the doeskin gloves also are royal blue.

The Big Decision.

"Where shall we go?"

"Oh, I don't know—any place."

"Where do you want to go?"

"I don't know. Where do you?"

"I don't care. You say."

"No, you say. Any place suits me."

"Well, we might try Potts' again."

"I'm sick of them. What about Clapps'?"

"I'm fed up on them, too. If we could only think of some new place——"

"What about Tinker's? We haven't been there in a long time."

"I'm sick of them, too."

"Well, if you like Potts——"

"Oh, no; really, I don't mind Potts . . ."

"No, let's go to Clapp's——"

"No, let's go to Potts'——"

"Oh, well, we might just as well stop in the drug store."

Stool Pigeon.

You have just settled comfortably at the counter to attack your hot roast beef sandwich when you are conscious of a presence. You look around. A man and girl are parked behind you . . . looking at your plate appraisingly. Well, just let 'em look, you decide grimly. You are not going to be hurried.

You try to eat slowly, but your conscience goads you. You feel their eyes piercing your back. The waitress brings your ice tea. You stir it nervously. Why are you such a worm? After all, you have as good a right at the counter as they have.

Now they are whispering. You know it is about you. Out of the corner of your eye you see the girl shift from one foot to the other. Was that a sigh?

Well, if they didn't want to wait, why did they come to this place? You are NOT going to be hurried.

The woman next you leaves and the girl perches triumphantly on her stool.

"Go ahead and order," says her escort.

"No, I'll wait," she says with the air of a martyr, looking at you.

Well, she might as well make up her mind to wait because you are going to take your time. What is more, you are going to have a fresh peach sundae for dessert.

The man is at your elbow studying the menu with the girl. They keep glancing at your plate. Are they checking the bites?

Your sandwich is almost gone. "Dessert?" asks the waitress. The air is pregnant with suspense. For a moment you hesitate, then you say firmly. "Yes. A fresh peach sundae!"

There is a feeling about you that a piece of lead has been dropped. The man shifts to the other foot. The waitress brings your sundae. You start gobbling it—stop, try to eat slowly. After all, you have as good a right——

The sundae is tasteless. When you are half through you push it back. "My check please," you call to the waitress, bounding happily from your stool.

The Debaters.

"Now I want you to give me that check."

"I'm not going to do any such thing. This is my party."

"It is not. You paid the last time."

"Yes, but just think of the times you've taken me."

"Well I don't care, I invited you——"

"You did not, I was the one who proposed it. Don't you know, I said . . ."

"Oh well, it doesn't matter. I'll pay this time and then the next time——"

"No, please—well tell me how much it is?"

"It's only $1.65—you didn't eat anything."

"I did too. I ate lots more than you did. That's why I ought to have the check."

"No, no, now stop that! This is my check."

"Well, if you just won't give me the check I suppose I'll have to let you pay this time, but it just makes me terribly unhappy——"

"Oh well, if it'll make you any happier, I'll just give you the check this time, but it really humiliates me——"

"Well, of course, if you feel that way—well maybe we might as well go Dutch——"

Measure Your Bones To Find Normal Weight

College Experiments Reveal Wide Diversity in Types.

By Ida Jean Kain.

BEFORE YOU despair of getting down to normal weight, be sure that it is your normal weight. You can't just go by your height in estimating the weight best for you. With extremely thick bones your normal weight may be as much as 28 pounds heavier than another person of the same height with thin bones.

Such a wide variation in normal weight for persons of the same height was found to exist in experiments conducted recently by Dr. C. H. McCloy, and reported by Miss Eleanor Metheny of the physical education division, at the State University of Iowa.

By accurately measuring the circumference of the chest and the width of hips and knees it was possible to take structure as well as height into account in these experiments. As a result, it was discovered that one girl of 5 feet 6 inches was normal weight at 117 pounds, another at 145 pounds—a difference of 28 pounds! A third girl with medium build was normal weight at 130 pounds.

Measure Your Fat.

Miss Metheny refers to the slightly built girl as Mary, the medium size girl as Jane, and the girl with the large frame as Anne. And to quote her: "It is only reasonable to assume with their varying dimensions that Jane should normally weigh more than Mary, and Anne more than either . . . In observing these girls it was plainly seen that had Mary ever reached 130 pounds she would have been as well upholstered as a davenport and that had Anne lost 25 pounds she would have been mere skin and bones."

As far as the average person is concerned, there is—as admitted by Miss Metheny—a decided drawback to such an accurate computation of normal weight. Special instruments are required to make the measurements and the calculations must be made by a trained person. Just knowing of the wide variation in weight for height, however, may restrain you from setting your goal at a weight normal for someone with a much slighter structure than yours.

Since you are entitled to a protective layer of fat for warmth and reserve against illness as well as beauty, Miss Metheny gives a "rule of thumb" for measuring your subcutaneous fat. "It may be estimated by taking the thumb and forefinger and picking up a fold of skin just above the hip. For men this fold should be approximately half an inch thick, and for women about three-fourths of an inch."

A Simple Rule.

The "Mary" mentioned in the experiments was found to be underweight, and when her muscles were measured, it was discovered that she needed to develop her musculature quite as much as a richer diet, the latter to provide the protective layer of fat. Whether or not your muscles are undeveloped, it would be a mistake to go on a diet to gain without exercising. You want curves, not fat pads, and exercise is necessary for perfect distribution of weight.

An easy way to include structure in your estimation of normal weight is to allow 100, 105 or 110 pounds for the first 5 feet of height, depending on a slight, medium or wide frame. To this basic weight 5½ pounds is added for each additional inch of height. If your frame is extremely small or large, allow further for a 10 per cent variation so that your normal weight will conform as closely as possible to your build.

Normal weight depends upon bone structure.

How Various Arthritis Forms Are Being Treated

Summer is a good time for arthritics generally. Their pains are lessened, and their joints loosen up so they can get around. This is an indication that the best treatment is heat. And even in the summer the use of heat will help the natural curative powers of the weather and the sun.

There are so many different kinds of arthritis that no general statement about treatment can be made which will fit all cases. Then any particular kind of arthritis may occur in different degrees of severity.

Affects Young People.

There are two general kinds of chronic arthritis—one in which there is an overgrowth of bone around the joints and the other in which there is atrophy of the joint structures. Most cases that one sees belong to the former type; it is the common rheumatism of middle age and old age. Usually it affects the bones of the hands or feet with possibly one or two other joints, and usually it is not severe or crippling. When it affects the spine, however, it is very disabling.

The atrophic type affects young people and is much more severe. It may finally involve every joint in the body.

In treatment of the bony overgrowth type, the main reliance is on mechanical manipulations or heat treatments, or both.

Diet Not Factor.

Diet has very little influence on this form of arthritis. My readers are forever writing in to ask me to send them the diet I recommended for arthritis. Now I have never recommended a diet of any kind for arthritis for I have never seen any diet influence a case either for good or bad. When the patient is overweight, reduction diets should be planned and when the patient is undernourished a rich nutritious diet should be given, but that is not a specific diet. Some have recommended a high vitamin, low fat diet, the vitamins, especially Vitamin B, being added in concentrated form, but the results of this diet do not seem to me to be any different from any other.

The use of the products of the dutless glands, especially thyroid extract, is highly recommended by some.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, July 7.

A CERTAIN number of weddings, round and about, during the bridal month, now in the memory books or nowhere at all, have had more than the usual interest, it seems to me. Why, right here in town we had a beautiful example of classic association which ripened into love and fell off the tree into matrimony. The Rev. Dr. Alvin E. Magary, pastor of a local Presbyterian temple, promised to love and cherish Miss Marion Mlayton, who for six years has played the organ in his church. She's a very fine hymn-tune coaxer, too.

Then the Rev. Dr. Frederic S. Fleming, who is rector of Trinity Church here, which is considered the No. 1 parochial post of the Episcopal Church and a certain road to the episcopate, said the words over his daughter, Mary Louise, to Eugene McAvoy, of Chicago—where Dr. Fleming was once rector of the Church of the Atonement, 'way out on the North Side. Very high church it was, too, with a midnight mass whose music lasted hours. I went in 1920, I remember. I admit to a faint surprise when I read that Ben Hecht's girl child is engaged to John Patterson, of here, once of Richmond, with the rites set for fall. Surprise — because the one-time Smart Boy of Chicago seems always a Peter Pan of stage and screen hokum, and it's odd that he has a great big girl like Edwina.

The shock of the official love season came when I learned that Florence Brinkman and Clifton Hoffman were to be joined forever, by the Rev. Charles Jaynes, jr., the 8-year-old cleric of Cleveland. Mind you, I know it counts, as the little voice pipes the bonds, but I can't help feeling a faint air about it of a marriage in a submarine, or on the tail of a box kite. Just a stick-in-the-mud, is Mme. Hughes, but she can't help preferring a marriage by a deep bass.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Annette Kellerman, the swim lady who gave the girls—not to mention the boys—the clinging one-piece swim suit 30 years ago, has been back in town, shapely and peppy as ever, though she is pushing 50. Tanned and fit, she let off a lusty round of cheers for the current skin-tight and tiny suits, which might have called out the National Guard even in Annette's own exciting days. She herself heads a swim-suit company now turning out beach eye-poppers so tiny you can almost cram 'em into a compact.

Watermelon Is Favorite For Menus

Supply Abundant and Is Improved in Quality.

Department of Agriculture Offers Advice on Purchasing.

This season the ever popular watermelon is occupying a prominent place on Washington tables, for this delicately flavored fruit has been inexpensive and plentiful.

Although a patriotic spirit causes us to believe that watermelons are 100 per cent native, this fruit reportedly was eaten and enjoyed by the ancient Pharaohs of Egypt. Scientists call the watermelon Citrillus vulgaris, and in India there is a Sankrit word for melon. The Caribbean, through the centuries a treasure ground of rare foods, produced watermelons to such an extent that this region is often considered its birthplace. Watermelons figure colorfully in our native culinary history, for records mention our Pilgrim ancestors gathering this fruit a scant ten years after their arrival on that much discussed Mayflower. Throughout the Middle West, Marquette was everywhere greeted by green fields of melons planted long by the aborigines.

Today through scientific breeding experiments, conducted by the United States Government marketing agreements, far better melons are being grown than those which John Alden and Priscilla considered so toothsome.

Southern Favorite.

The South is logically enough the home of most of the melon family. When one thinks of tempting cool pink watermelon meat, pictures of cunning little dark-skinned farinas hidden deep in watermelon vines comes to the mind. The humidity of such Southeastern States as Georgia, Florida, North and South Carolina makes them a particularly fertile field for cultivating and consuming their native product. These States produce the majority of the market crops and since April 30 watermelons have been pouring into the District in carloads. They will continue in popularity and in reasonable price for another month at least, for they are at their pink of perfection right now.

Only United States Government Inspected No. 1 Southern melons are being shipped for consumption this year. Naturally this close survey insures Washington families of nothing but the cream of the crop when purchasing a grade 1 melon. A slightly less expensive melon is also being sold, as every melon grown cannot come under a No. 1 quality safeguard. You can determine quality by a few direct evidences.

1. Taste. This is the criterion for all fine flavored melons. Occasionally an obliging dealer will "plug" a melon for a customer's benefit. "Citrullus vulgaris" has no great food value. Enjoyment of it comes from the delight of eating the crisp, cool sweetness. Watermelons contain low amounts of vitamins and minerals.

Color Is Test.

2. Color. W. R. Beattie, United States Department of Agriculture, an authority on the subject, suggests buying bright lustrous green melons. They should contain some creamy yellow coloring, not dull yellow or white as a background.

3. Sound. It seems comical to state that watermelons should possess "a deep bass voice," but the best melons have a deep throaty sound when thumped, and they are thus sure to be mature.

4. Size. Watermelons are getting even larger than in the past, and every housewife knows the futility of trying to squeeze a melon into the refrigerator. Modern discerning growers have graciously made an about face and created a small, de luxe model designed for the smaller new automatic refrigerator.

Melons should be served ice cold and perhaps with a pinch of salt to please certain tastes. An expert carver is sure to be in demand when a melon is being sliced, for some like their watermelon lengthwise, others round, or in half. Melon balls are cooling and sweet when cut from the heart. In Washington, varieties of fresh melon are obtainable so that a color-minded hostess may concoct festive fruit cups combining cubes or balls of watermelon, honey dew, Persian, hearts of gold.

No summer outdoor feast seems complete without a watermelon. This gay-looking fruit is currently favored at outdoor parties, for inviting your friends to a Saturday watermelon feast will characterize you as a discerning hostess. Reliably tested recipes for other watermelon uses are not easy to find, as many husbands like their slice of the melon "as is." Here are suggestions which can be readily tried now while this fruit is so plentiful.

Fresh Pear, Watermelon and Ginger Salad.

Arrange thin slices of fresh pear in lettuce cups with balls of watermelon. Sprinkle finely chopped candied ginger over the top and serve with cream, French or honey fruit dressing. Enlarged, this salad is appropriate for a hot weather supper dish.

These Twins Pursue Their Favorite Summer Pastime

Watermelon days are at their prime right now? Never has the fruit of the vine been so economical or scientifically perfected for good eating as during this season. The busy little Peck twins, Rea and Lea, 1316 Sixth street southwest, seem pleased over their possession of this 70-pound No. 1 quality melon.

READERS' FOOD FORUM

Chicken-Livers, Clams and Bacon Make Nice Sunday Dish.

WHAT is the most popular Sunday morning breakfast served in and around Washington? What is the favorite main dish eaten Sunday after Sunday by late breakfasteers? Washington hostesses were asked to register their opinions for The Post's food page on Sunday morning menu habits. Their replies are ingenious and interesting.

Meat Combination

Miss Ward Sudderth, 1236 Thirty-sixth street northwest: "I have never seen my special Sunday morning breakfast served anywhere else, and

I have been catering to unusual menu whims for years. Sometime ago a wealthy and widely traveled dilettante was visiting in Washington. He heard of my 'festive board' and was recommended to me as a great connoisseur of food. We became friends through our mutual fondness for interesting dishes. This man introduced me to his favorite Sunday morning breakfast which in turn became mine. The main dish contains bacon, clams and chicken livers. These three ingredients blend together in a unique fashion. It is very easy to prepare.

"I first fry 3 strips of bacon, good and crisp, then drain the bacon and let it dry. I toss in 3 fresh clams and 3 chicken livers in the same grease and let them cook until tender. I again add the bacon and serve the delicacy piping hot. This portion serves one, and all that is required to complete the treat is toast and coffee and either grapefruit or cantaloupe. This is what I call a 'pretty dish' to set before my king.

Eggs and Sausage.

Miss Martha Ryan, 1627 Thirty-fifth street northwest: "Since I have been associated with Mrs. J. J. Lawlers' household, I have been preparing a Sunday morning breakfast that never fails. Mr. and Mrs. Lawler and the three little Lawlers don't tire of the menu day after day. Breakfast is served around 8:30, and always starts off with baked apple and thick cream. There is oatmeal for the grown folks and cream of wheat for the children. The mainstay is a hot platter of scrambled eggs and broiled sausage—the kind that comes in a long casing. There is coffee and milk for the little ones and a nice fresh coffee cake which is sort of an added treat. This is a comfortable breakfast and may sound very filling in the summertime but when there are children growing up, a hearty cereal and fruit are needed, even in hot weather. Sometimes broiled ham and fried potatoes are very popular, but the scrambled eggs never vary."

Southern Fried Chicken

Mrs. Theodore Tiller, 3409 Mount Pleasant street: "Ordinarily, I like what probably is the simplest breakfast known—toast and coffee. My wishes are not necessarily criterions of what my guests like, for my 'brunches' seem to be well known and liked by week-end or house guests. I may say this with pardonable pride, for their favorite is one that is a prime choice all over the South.

"We begin this meal with fresh fruit cup, and we never use anything but the markets' choicest fresh fruits. Next comes real Southern fried chicken, and is it good? It's the kind of tender, crispy chicken that melts in your mouth. We serve hot waffles with maple syrup with the chicken and of course these are popular with my guests regardless of what section of the country they come from. I also include buttered grits, a typical Southern cereal that is an inseparable Sunday morning companion. Hot coffee rounds out this favorite breakfast."

Crepes Suzettes.

Mrs. S. Fay Harper, 2440 Sixteenth street northwest: "It may be surprising to mention crepes suzettes as my favorite Sunday morning breakfast, but that's the way I feel about them. My husband and family 'adore' them as the piece de resistance of a light but satisfying breakfast.

"Here is the recipe I favor for these little hot cakes. I beat 4 eggs light and fluffy and add 1 cup of milk or 1 of cream if I make this extra rich. Then I mix in ½ teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons of powdered or granulated sugar, 3 or 4 tablespoons of flour and a large tablespoon of butter. When my batter is light but not too 'poury,' I drop it into sizzling butter in a small pan. As the texture of these cakes must be golden brown and very dainty, I fry one cake at a time, and serve them very simply with only their own butter sauce. For breakfast I naturally omit the elaborate French cordial sauce.

Sausages Useful On Summer Menu

Sausages for summer! Most housewives think of them as winter or fall dishes, but there are many attractive and summery ways of creating a menu around sausages. Here are the ingredients for an easy-to-prepare entree:

6 large baked potatoes
1-3 cup hot milk
1½ teaspoons salt
Pepper
Paprika
Parsley
Summer sausage in natural casings

Cut potatoes in half lengthwise and scoop out centers. Mash well, add hot milk and beat until smooth. Add seasonings and whip until light and creamy. Refill shells, place slit Vienna sausages on each potato. Bake in 400 degree oven for 10 minutes, until brown. When ready to serve, sprinkle chopped parsley and paprika on top. Surround platter with a variety of summer sausages, such as sliced salami, bologna, frankfurters, and a center grouping of bologna head cheese.

Serving Hot Bread.

If you bake hot bread in one of the new glass oven dishes you may bring it to the table in the baking dish. That will keep the bread hot longer.

Tasty Frozen Dishes Suggested in Contest

Wide Variety of Refrigerator Recipes Holds Attractive Possibilities for Adding Zest to Summer Dessert and Salad Courses.

WIDE variety marked the entries in last week's Post recipe contest for refrigerator dishes. Many attractive ideas were sumitted for creating new dessert tantalizers by way of the serviceable modern refrigerator and ice chest. Delicious fruit marlows, maple mousses, apricot velvets and Bavarian royals were a few of the tempting sweets suggested. Several different versions of ice box pies and rolls were offered, among them a grapefruit chiffon pie and butterscotch refrigerator rolls. Chilled soup and pressed meat recipes suggested a tang of variety to everyday summer menus. Salad formulas recommended the use of vitamin vegetables, shredded meats and fruits, nuts, fish, chicken and even cheeses.

Five of these entries received prizes. There were 14 recipes of sufficient merit to be awarded honorable mention.

Molded Entree

MRS. DAVIES.

Mrs. Alec Pierce Davies, 1628 Columbia road northwest, submitted a crabmeat mousse of such beauty and delicate flavor that she was awarded first prize of $3. A well-made fish, fowl or meat mousse is a real friend during warm summer months, for it combines high nutritive quality with a dainty appearance. Mrs. Davies' spicy mousse proves that even a bride can mould effective and edible entrees without years of experience.

CRABMEAT MOUSSE.

1 package of lemon gelatin
1½ cups boiling water
1 8-ounce can crabmeat
1½ tablespoons grated onion
1½ tablespoons prepared horseradish
Juice of 1 lemon
½ cup whipped cream
½ cup salad dressing
¾ teaspoon salt
Cayenne pepper
1 tablespoon chopped green pepper
½ cup finely chopped celery

Dissolve gelatin in boiling water, cool and set in refrigerator to chill and congeal slightly. Pick over crabmeat, combine with onion, horseradish, lemon juice, salt and cayenne. When jello is slightly congealed, add salad dressing and whipped cream. Mix thoroughly and combine with crabmeat mixture. Add green pepper and celery and pour into oiled custard cups. Serve on crisp lettuce and garnish with stuffed olives, sliced eggs and tomatoes.

Bridge Favorite

Mrs. Mildred Lemer, 2817 Seventh street northeast, is second prize winner. Her recipe is for a sparkling fruit salad. There is also a salad dressing that has a piquancy just subtle enough to contrast well with fresh fruits. The combination is a favorite with Mrs. Lemers' guests over the bridge table. As today's prize-winner says, "This salad is quite nice served as a main dish, as the whole family will enjoy it during hot summer months."

FROZEN FRUIT SALAD

1 orange, 1 banana,
2 slices of pineapple, 1 cup fruit salad dressing,
¾ cup white grapes or Royal Anne Cherries,
1 cup cream, 12 maraschino cherries.

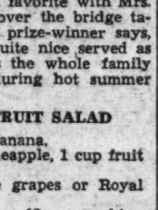
Free orange from all skin and rind. Cut pineapple fine and halve the cherries. Seed and peel the grapes. Place fruit in refrigerator and chill. Whip cream and combine salad dressing with cream. Combine fruits and add banana, sliced very thin. Add fruits to cream and salad dressing. Pour into tray and allow to freeze. When frozen, cut in cubes. Serve on lettuce leaf, or on the salad plate covered with a paper doily.

FRUIT SALAD DRESSING

2 egg yolks—1 tablespoon flour, 2 tablespoons sugar—½ cup strained honey or maple syrup, ½ cup cream and juice of 2 lemons.

Mix honey, flour and sugar and cook in double boiler for 10 minutes. Add lemon juice and beaten egg yolks slowly and cook for 5 minutes, stirring constantly. Remove from fire and cool. This can be kept in refrigerator in a glass jar indefinitely. Add whipped cream to salad dressing before serving.

Crunchy Dessert



MRS. KING.

Mrs. J. H. King, 1623 Thirty-fifth street northwest, has a prize-winning formula for a crunchy, crispy dessert. The procedure for the basic ice cream mixture is a "tried and true" method which produces a rich, even texture. It is the nutty, crumbly taste of the added butter crisp mixture which gives the ice cream its distinctive flavor. Mrs. King's choice of nuts and corn flakes is a happy one, for this adds a brittle texture to the smooth cream. Sprinkling a coating of butter crisp on top imparts a gay biscuit tortoni appearance to the dessert.

Butter Crisp Ice Cream.

1½ cups milk
2 teaspoons vanilla extract
½ cup sugar
1 cup whipping cream, whipped
2 eggs, beaten
Salt

Scald the milk in double boiler. Add the scalded milk slowly to the sugar, which has been mixed with the beaten eggs, and a few grains of salt. Cool. Add vanilla. Fold in whipped cream, beaten to a custard consistency. Pour mixture into freezing tray of refrigerator. Place in freezing compartment and when half frozen, stir in half of the butter crisp mixture and sprinkle remainder on top. Return to freezer and freeze at coldest degree.

Butter Crisp Mixture.

1 tablespoon melted butter
¼ cup fine corn flake crumbs
2 tablespoons brown sugar
¼ cup nutmeats, chopped fine

Add melted butter to corn flake crumbs, brown sugar and nutmeats, blended together. Blend thoroughly. Place mixture in shallow pan and place in preheated oven. Bake approximately 2 minutes, stirring the mixture several times. Cool and crumble.

Zestful Sweet

The fourth award goes to Miss Mary Lou Carmeron, 1929 Sixteenth street northwest, for one of the simplest recipes entered. Peppermint pudding is comparatively inexpensive, quick and easy to whip up, and it possesses a zestful fresh flavor. Peppermint in one form or another adds immeasurable verve to any summer dinner, and in the case of this attractive pudding, the flavor is already in the dessert, rather than in the usual after dinnermint form.

Peppermint Pudding.

¼ pound peppermint stick candy
2 cups whipping cream
1½ teaspoons gelatin in 1 tablespoon cold water
16 ladyfingers

Crush the candy and put in double boiler with ½ cup of cream. Melt over hot water and add soaked gelatin. Set aside to cool and add to whipped cream. Line a mold with ladyfingers, then cover them with a thick layer of this mixture, another layer of ladyfingers and more cream mixture until mold is full. Top with the cream mixture. Set in refrigerator several hours. Slice and serve. Garnish with strips of candied grapefruit peel if desired.

Nourishing Salad

MRS. SNYDER.

For a healthful summer salad with a completely different flavor, Mrs. A. Snyder, 4780 Twenty-first road, North Arlington, Va., has the answer. The final fillip of cottage cheese or crabmeat in the ring center, makes this salad a complete and nourishing entree.

Delicious Salad.

1 quart tomato juice
1 can bean sprouts
1 small can ripe olives
1 cup celery (cut very fine)
1teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
1 tablespoon sugar
Juice of ½ lemon
½ tablespoon onion juice
Dash of cayenne pepper
2 rounding tablespoons of gelatin
½ cup cold water

Pour cold water over gelatin. Let stand a few minutes. Heat tomato juice to boiling point, and pour over gelatin and stir until dissolved. Add onion juice, salt, pepper and Worcestershire sauce. Cool, and when mixture begins to thicken, add bean sprouts, olives cut in small pieces and celery. Pour into a flat pan and cut in squares or pour into small individual molds or a ring mold. Chill, unmold on lettuce leaves and fill center with seasoned cottage cheese or crabmeat salad. Serve with mayonnaise. Serves 15 to 18.

Meat Salads Excellent For Hot Weather Meals

On warm days there is nothing quite as good as salads.

Meat salads may be divided into two groups—the toss-up variety and the jellied ones—and which you choose depends upon your preference and the time for preparation. Jellied salads must be made several hours in advance so that they will become thoroughly chilled and set.

Meats for Salad.

As to the choice of meats for salad, practically any kind of cooked meat may be used. Leftover roast, chilled and diced into cubes, is excellent, but if none of this is on hand, you may use the already cooked ham or ready-to-serve meats which always are available at the market.

For a quickly prepared toss-up salad here is a suggestion. Dice the meat into small cubes. Combine with an eaqual amount of chopped celery and apple. Season with salt and pepper and moisten with salad dressing. Serve in lettuce cups. Sprinkle with paprika for added color.

Swedish Trend Reaches Food, Royal Visitors Stir Interest

Scandinavian Princesses Are Experts in Culinary Arts; Ingrid Excelling at Souffles; 'Dream Cookies' Served at Embassy Reception Here.

The Swedish influence in American life, already evidenced in play clothes, health methods and arts and crafts, is reaching into the culinary field.

Current interest in things Swedish, inaugurated possibly by Greta Garbo, has reached a peak with the celebrations of the anniversary of the arrival of Swedish colonists in the Delaware River Valley 300 years ago.

The visit here of Crown Princess Louise and her son, Prince Bertil, doubtless spurred imaginative housewives to experiment more freely with Swedish dishes. At the reception at the Swedish Embassy Sunday for the royal visitors, there was served a Swedish cookie that caused wide comment among the guests. The confection is called a "Dream cookie" and is often served at the Embassy.

The Dream Cookie is very simple to prepare. To make about 50 small oval type dream cookies, brown ½ pound of butter, stir until cold. Then mix 2 teaspoons of vanilla with ¼ pound of sugar, add to butter and cream, then add 1 pound of flour and 1 teaspoon baking powder sifted. Mix ingredients well, then form cookies by shaping separate portions of mixture between 2 teaspoons. This teaspoon shaping, if done compactly and pressed hard, will produce oval cookies about the size of a small egg. These cookies are arranged on a greased baking sheet, placed in a slow moderately hot oven and baked to an even golden brown.

A little-known fact surrounding the royal family is its activity in the culinary arts. Princess Ingrid, daughter of the Crown Prince, and her two cousins, Princesses Marthe and Margarita, especially will inspire local home-makers by their industry and simplicity.

We rarely think of princesses bending over stove or cookbook. In Sweden one requisite for perfect womanhood is an ability to plan, market and cook well. These three attractive blueboods have had domestic education incredibly thorough. They have been envied by many a housewife, for their knowledge of "man's weakness" has made happy married women of all of them.

The spirited Princess Ingrid's love of good cooking is evinced in souffles and in all her native dishes. She is skillful, too, as organizer of a household budget—even though a royal one. Recently, when her brother ordered a dinner sent to the royal palace, Ingrid herself prepared the dinner and carried all equipment to the waiting car. The footman was left with nothing but an ice cream freezer to carry. Ingrid, after setting table and serving dinner, proved that any good housewife can manage nicely without servants.

Each of the three Scandinavian princesses possesses special domestic talents. Princess Marthe is proud of her ability to garnish. She has ample opportunity to display her originality in nightly serving her native smorgasbord. Hors d'oeuvres are characteristic of Sweden's imagination in foods.

Princess Margarita has invented one of Sweden's most famous desserts. She is ingenious as a concoctor of foods and is particularly proud of her company dessert decoration called "the little candy princess." Cooking alone is not all fun for Swedish housewives. The three princesses themselves, while attending the notable cook school of Mrs. Akerstrom, practiced floor scrubbing and many menial scullery tasks along with ordinary day students. This instructor eventually was persuaded by her royal pupils to compose a cookbook filled with many interesting national recipes.

Though many of us consider Scandinavian dishes too hearty for summer eating, a menu selected here is designed for midsummer Washington heat:

Herrings and Eggs in Cream.

Cold fruit soup
Herring and eggs in cream
Swedish leaf
Assorted Swedish sandwiches
Princess Margaret's torte
Hot coffee

Here is the recipe for an appealing entree typical of the tantalizing quality unique in Swedish food. The recipe is from Jennie Akerstrom's "Swedish Princesses Cook Book," published by Albert Bonnier:

2 salted fat herrings
3 hard-cooked eggs, sliced
1 large yellow onion, minced
2 tablespoons butter
¾ cup cream
1 tablespoon parsley, minced

Clean herrings and soak in cold water overnight. Trim out fillets, free from skins and bones, wipe dry, cut in cubes. Cook onion in butter until well done but not browned, add herring cubes, cook a few seconds, then add egg and cream and heat well. Turn into a serving dish.

Correction: Butter Used in Cookies

The food editor wishes to make an addition to the ingredients called for in one of last week's prize-winning recipes. The recipe for delicious health cookies was submitted by Mrs. L. E. Donaldson, 632 Princeton place northwest. All the ingredients for her recipe were published correctly except for the omission of half cup butter. The amount of shortening was mentioned in the method of preparation but was typographically omitted in the list of ingredients. The recipe is republished by popular request.

. . . dean of America's political writers!

More than a political commentator, Mark Sullivan is a political analyst and an outstanding historian of this important era.

At 17 he was a reporter; at 37 he was editor of Collier's.

He has covered practically all the national political conventions since 1904—and for the past 19 years he has lived in Washington observing and writing about two of the most important decades in American history.

Not only does he observe the political events of America but he is keenly interested in the interplay of politics with the social progress of America.

Thus, he has written the history of "Our Times" from Roosevelt I to Roosevelt II, covering its political, social and economic developments.

He writes to inform—not to sway the reader; he reduces the complex government formula of men and issues into a simple equation for every man to understand what is really going on.

Today, he is the dean of Washington political correspondents—and his column appears in nearly 100 other newspapers besides The Washington Post.

Bedtime Stories

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Mutual Interest.

What you desire you will find
That others also have in mind.
—Bobby Coon.

"Ha!" exclaimed Bobby, and forgot all about Frogs.

That is true. If there is anything that you really want and are willing to try to get you may be sure that others also want it and will try to get it. This is called competition, and competition is a good thing. It sharpens wits. It promotes earnest endeavor. It stimulates courage. It leads to better things, to better ways of living. Without competition life would be dull, uninteresting, and we would continually slip back instead of going forward.

It is just so with the people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows, the Laughing Brook and the Big River. Competition is going on all the time, night and day. What one wants others have an equal desire for and will strive to get. The result is that the smartest or the strongest succeed and these are, of course, the best fitted to live and people the Great World.

Mistress Moon was shining when Bobby Coon came down the Laughing Brook to the Smiling Pool. For some time he had heard Grandfather Frog's deep bass voice. Indeed it was this that had brought Bobby down to the Smiling Pool. It had awakened a desire for a Frog dinner. He didn't expect to catch Grandfather Frog. He long ago learned the uselessness of trying to catch that wise old fellow. But there were young Frogs at the Smiling Pool. Frogs lacking the wisdom of age, and so easier to catch. And young Frogs were better eating anyway.

Bobby had caught two Frogs when he came to a place on the bank where the grass was pressed down as if something heavy had been dragged out of the water. "Ha!" exclaimed Bobby and forgot all about Frogs. He turned and followed the rather broad path of bent-over grass. It led straight out onto the Green Meadows. Understanding came to Bobby Coon and his eyes gleamed with desire.

"Mrs. Snapper did this," said he to himself. "Yes, sir, Mrs. Snapper was along here this very day. No one else would leave a trail like this. She came ashore to lay her eggs. Nothing else would have brought her ashore. This is the time of year she always lays her eggs. I had forgotten all about it. Turtle eggs." Bobby smacked his lips.

Bobby now forgot everything else. If he could find Mrs. Snapper's eggs what a feast he would have. There would be a lot of them. He knew from experience. Once he had found the place where she had buried them it would be an easy matter to dig them up. He licked his lips as he hurried along that easily followed trail. Finally he came to the edge of a wide strip of newly plowed ground. On the edge of this the trail ended. You see there had been a heavy shower in the afternoon and this had washed away all signs of Mrs. Snapper's trail.

"Those eggs are out there somewhere," muttered Bobby. "I'll find them if it takes me all night." He started out onto the plowed land. He moved slowly, intent on finding a place where there were indications that the soil had recently been disturbed. It might be a long job, even an unsuccessful job. Again, at any minute, he might happen on what he was looking for.

Now that very evening Jimmy Skunk had taken it into his head to go hunting for Turtle eggs. He is very fond of them and he has become expert in finding them. He knows what kind of places Turtles like best for hiding their eggs. He knows just where to hunt, and wastes no time in unlikely places. So when he decided to go hunting eggs he headed straight for that plowed ground. You see he knew it was near enough to the Smiling Pool for Turtles hunting the nesting places to find it.

Two-thirds down a furrow Jimmy met Bobby Coon. Each knew what the other was looking for. Bobby Coon growled. It was a most unpleasant growl. He drew his lips back to show his teeth. Jimmy Skunk stamped with his front feet and his big plume of a tail went straight up in the air. Bobby took a step forward and growled more deeply. Jimmy stamped again and there was such a threat in that stamp that Bobby backed a few steps. Jimmy moved forward. Bobby backed. With every backward step Bobby grew angrier. But what could he do about it? Nothing. So presently he moved over to another furrow and resumed his hunt for eggs while Jimmy continued on quite as if there was no one else about.

Confederate Likes Gettysburg, Asks To Stay Forever

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Gettysburg, Pa., July 7.—One Confederate veteran, William W. Banks, of Houston, Tex., was so "comfortably housed, sumptuously fed, superbly served and entertained" here during the Blue and Gray reunion that he wired the quartermaster general at Washington yesterday asking that the old veterans be allowed to stay at Gettysburg "until Gabriel shall call us."

Banks said he sent the 162-word message as "self-appointed representative of a committee of the whole." No answer came and Banks boarded a train for his home last evening.

Unionists Accused Of Slaying Musick

London, Ky., July 7 (U.P.).—The defense in the Harlan coal conspiracy trial today completed presentation of its version of the killing of Bennett Musick.

Three young miners testified Musick was the unintentional victim of a union-sponsored shooting designed to arouse sympathy for claims of the United Mine Workers of America that mine owners conspired to keep the union out of the rich eastern Kentucky coal field.

Government witnesses in this trial of 16 coal corporations and 40 individuals on charges of conspiracy to violate the Wagner labor relations act had testified deputy sheriffs occupied two automobiles from which originated the barrage of bullets which killed Musick on the night of February 9, 1937, in his home.

Help for Those Who'll Help Themselves

Working His Way to Independence

1 Ernest Lance, of Tennessee, like many others found himself stranded in the Capital without a dime or a friend until he turned to the Washington Self-Help Exchange. Now he, with nearly a score of others, has a degree of independence and security on the exchange's farm near Kensington, Md. He is shown cutting hay.

Picking Beans Is Another Way

2 Arnel Bierer, like Lance, finds employment at the farm, which is one of many projects conducted by the Exchange. He picks beans, which are among the 10 to 20 bushels of produce shipped daily to the Exchange's headquarters at 2529 Pennsylvania avenue northwest. The Exchange is less than a year old. Its 40-acre farm was a gift

Making Brooms Is Still Another Way

3 J. C. Sterling makes his way in the Self-Help Exchange organization by making brooms, another Exchange project. Workers are paid in scrip at an hourly rate. The scrip can be spent at Exchange headquarters for food, services such as haircuts and shaves, and articles turned out by other members of the organization.

Capital Chinese Commemorate a Year of War

Approximately 700 persons, nearly all Washington's Chinese population, marched yesterday to mark the first year of war with the Japanese. Miss King Ho Chue (above, left) marches in native dress with Chinese girls. "People of Japan—Arise and Join the Chinese people to Overthrow the Common Oppressor," says the banner, one of many in the parade, carried by Rose Lee (above, right).

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

HALLELUJAH EXPRESS

Presidential Special, July 8.

This Presidential train, of course, has the right of way over all other trains. Everything else is sidetracked to let it pass . . . Not only trains on the same track going in the same direction, but trains in the opposite direction are dispatched, when possible, so as not to pass a given point within an hour before the President's train passes.

* * * *

As usual on Presidential trips, the train becomes substantially the seat of the United States Government . . . But on this crucial trip, the New Deal is racing toward its destiny; the train is the political capital of the twentieth century, as the President sets out to nail down his Holy Grail in the 1938 elections.

Col. Starling . . . goes ahead.

* * * *

When President Roosevelt takes a short trip to Hyde Park his train consists of six cars; but on a transcontinental trip like this one, 10 to 12 cars are necessary. His own is at the rear end; next is the "official" car, or perhaps two of them, for the overflow of the White House party, and for eminent citizens with bouquets and pledges who climb aboard to ride for a while.

"—lineup for a showerbath."

Next are three compartment cars for reporters, with a couple of typewriters rattling away in each compartment off and on all day. Ahead is the photographers' car and the diner and a pullman or two and the club car for cold drinks and relaxation, and the baggage car, where the White House has a couple of station wagons full of baggage, a little extra for the sea voyage; several trunks and quite an array of traveling bags.

* * * *

The Secret Service men are back at the rear end. Col. Starling, head of the President's Secret Service detail, has gone on ahead of the train . . . In the front car are telegraph men, extra railroad personnel, and Dan Moorman, the B. & O. mastermind who has routed the train from Washington.

* * * *

Usually there's a combination tub-shower in the Presidential car, and a shower bath in the club car forward for the rest of the party . . . Thirty or 40 take their turns at bathing, which spreads this ceremonial out on a schedule stretching through the whole day . . . A lone girl reporter is apt to complain sardonically because there isn't a shower exclusively for women.

* * * *

The train, of course, is air cooled, and this illustrates the influence of inventions on the course of history . . . Without air-cooled trains, there is some question that this trip would have been made at all, and ergo whether F. D. R. would have appeared in several States to raise a lance for his New Deal champions in the hot old summertime.

"—the local chieftains."

There are no special menus for the President and his party, and no special chefs to cook for them . . . Each railroad over which the special passes provides one of its diners, with its chefs, and the party eats from a menu like that of any crack train diner . . .

The colored porters bring back meals on trays to the President's car; most of the party is glad to eat beside the broad windows of the dining car, in an atmosphere a little more spacious than the compartments.

Naturally, the menu inclines a little toward the dishes of the region being traversed.

* * * *

Messages are being sent and received at all hours; telegrams and air mail from Washington; occasionally a telephone is plugged aboard the train at a station . . . The President is almost as close to his desk in the White House oval room as when he is at Hyde Park, where teletypes and phone wires are constantly alive with communication . . . (I have telephoned the White House and heard my question relayed to the secretariat at Hyde Park).

* * * *

Life aboard the special is far from dull . . . There is a 3,000-mile parade of the politically potent and hopeful . . . I have been aboard official trains where the No. 1 passenger made the same speech at every water tank town . . . But this is not true of Franklin Roosevelt; he seldom repeats himself, except for a favorite phrase.

Hearing Set In Fauquier Hospital Row

Infirmary Head Denies Barring Physicians From Hospital.

By the Associated Press.

Warrenton, Va., July 7.—J. E. Knight and Dr. William R. Pretlow, members of the Fauquier County Hospital Association, sought a court order today to compel J. C. Williams, treasurer of the association, to allow them to inspect the hospital's books.

Dr. Martin B. Hiden, secretary of the Fauquier County Medical Society, said the action by the two doctors had been instituted in Fauquier circuit court and a hearing had been set for Friday at 10 a. m.

Dr. Hiden said the court also was asked in the petition to require the association treasurer to supply a list of the hospital employes and their salaries.

The legal action, Dr. Hiden said, was the result of a break between the Warrenton Hospital and a majority of the county's practicing physicians. The institution adopted regulations approved by the American College of Surgeons and subsequently requested physicians to sign a written application for permission to practice in the hospital.

Dr. Hiden said the petition alleged the resources of the hospital were being wasted, that it was overstaffed with "highly paid employes" and questioned the efficiency of its management.

"There are 28 of our local Virginia doctors who are not on the hospital staff and who are not allowed the privileges of the hospital," Dr. Hiden said.

L. B. Bartenstein, chairman of the Hospital Association, said the hospital staff included three Warrenton physicians, one from Front Royal, and a Washington surgeon.

Bartenstein denied that any of the 28 physicians mentioned by Dr. Hiden had been prohibited from practicing in the hospital and added, "We have simply adopted the regulations approved by the American College of Surgeons and requested the physicians to sign a written application for permission to practice. This they have seen fit to refuse to do."

Gas Station Man Badly Wounded During Holdup

Two men stopped at the filling station, bought eight gallons of gas, and asked for a drink of water. As Stant went to get it, the men pulled a shotgun from the car and fired at him. The charge tore off his right hand and entered his abdomen. Stray pellets struck his face.

The two men then robbed him of $35 as he lay wounded, and drove off.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 7.—Judge Floyd H. Roberts of the Bristol Corporation Court today won the new Federal judgeship for Western Virginia over the candidacies of several other prominent Virginians, two of whom bore the indorsement of Senators Carter Glass and Harry F. Byrd.

President Roosevelt's appointment of the 55-year-old jurist, recommended by Representative John W. Flannagan, jr., the ninth district's ardent New Deal Congressman, was announced at Washington by the White House.

Judge Roberts, who narrowly missed election to the Virginia supreme court by the General Assembly eight years ago, has presided over the corporation court of Bristol since his appointment in 1914 by the late Gov. Henry C. Stuart.

Senators Glass and Byrd had recommended Circuit Judge A. C. Buchanan, of Tazewell and Frank Tavenner, of Woodstock, Assistant United States Attorney for Western Virginia. Others mentioned for the additional Western District judgeship created by the recent session of Congress included State Senator John S. Battle, of Charlottesville, A. D. Barksdale, of Lynchburg and Kennon C. Whittle, of Martinsville.

Judge Roberts was born near Abingdon, Washington County, the son of the late Henry B. and Mary C. Roberts. He attended the public schools and Abingdon Hale Academy, and received his law degree at the University of Virginia in 1902. In October of that year he began the practice of law in Bristol, where he gained wide popularity. He is the father of three sons, Bradley, Randolph and James.

Judge Roberts joins Judge John Paul, of Harrisonburg, on the Federal bench in the Western District. Judge Robert N. Pollard, of Richmond, was named several years ago as an additional judge in the Eastern District, to assist Judge Luther B. Way, of Norfolk.

JUDGE FLOYD H. ROBERTS.

Rival Rallies In Calvert Area Set Tomorrow

Md. Democrats, G.O.P. to Orate Less Than Mile From Each Other.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 7.—Maryland Democrats and Republicans will convene in Calvert County Saturday for rival rallies so close together orators in each camp might reasonably attempt to out-shout each other.

The Republican meeting, sponsored by the Associated Republican Clubs of Maryland in honor of Gov. and Mrs. Harry W. Nice, will be held at Seaside Park with the Democratic rally less than a mile away at North Beach.

The Republican organization hopes to pack an excursion boat for a holiday trip from Baltimore to the meeting ground. The Governor's party will be aboard.

W. David Tilghman, jr., chairman of the Republican State central committee, said the affair would be "primarily a social function," with politics supposed to take a back seat.

The Democratic rally is scheduled for evening, under sponsorship of the North Beach Democratic Club, and will be an out-and-out political meeting, with every party candidate for Statewide office invited to attend.

In addition to the gubernatorial aspirants, the club hopes to get U. S. Senator Millard E. Tydings and his rival, Representative David J. Lewis, on the same platform for the first time since Lewis formally began his campaign to unseat Maryland's senior Senator.

In the gubernatorial race, for example, Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor will attend a garden party in Annapolis Saturday afternoon, move on to North Beach that night, and down to Leonardtown on Sunday for a St. Mary's County "O'Conor - for - Governor" celebration.

Mayor Howard W. Jackson will be in Cambridge Friday night and will re-cross the bay Saturday morning to attend the Calvert County function.

State Senate President Lansdale G. Sasscer, who has been actively campaigning as Southern Maryland's "favorite son" candidate for the Governorship; Herbert M. Brune, jr., and John M. Kennedy are the other gubernatorial candidates invited.

U.S. Park Service Adds 1,000 Acres To Catoctin Area

Frederick, Md., July 7 (AP).—Condemnation proceedings which went through United States District Court have added approximately 1,000 Frederick County acres to the Catoctin recreational area, city officials said today.

The area is one of the model vacation camp centers developed by the National Park Service. Plans are now being completed to repairs roads and trails through the mountainous section, build cabins and shelters and provide facilities for public recreation.

Most of the land is not useable for other purposes. A small part of the recreational area is in Washington County.

Lewis Denies Drive Ties to Bridge Plans

$30,000,000 Program in State Is Non-Political, Says Aspirant.

Federal Aid to Depend on Project's Merits, He Emphasizes.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 7.—Representative David J. Lewis, of Cumberland, candidate for the United States Senate, denied today reports Maryland's $30,000,000 bridge construction program would be coupled with his campaign against Senator Millard E. Tydings.

Lewis' headquarters here issued a formal statement quoting Lewis as saying questions of whether or not the program would receive Federal aid funds depended on its engineering and financial aspects "rather than upon its political aspects."

If the program was "constructive and desirable for the State," and would "hold water when put to engineering and financial tests," then he "of course . . . would be glad to see Maryland have the benefit of these great public improvements," the Representative's statement said.

Lewis added that he is a member of a special commission with the task of determining the "soundness and integrity" of the roads commission's contructive program.

"This duty is of a judicial character, which he (Lewis) is bound to discharge in a judicial spirit after full consideration," the statement asserted.

Tydings Starts Next Week.

Baltimore, July 7. (AP).—Senator Millard E. Tydings, Maryland Democrat reported marked for elimination by the Administration, begins his active campaign for re-election next week with two ardent New Dealers as his opponents and a third managing his campaign.

Running on his record, which shows many votes against New Deal legislation, the senior Maryland Senator will open on July 15 a campaign being managed by his junior colleague, Senator George L. Radcliffe, Administration stalwart and friend of the President.

Tydings' first official foray will be into the Eastern Shore counties, home territory of Radcliffe and a region in which a tour has just been completed by Representative David J. Lewis, No. 1 challenger for Tydings' seat and generally regarded as the White House candidate.

Confusing the issue was Tydings' appointment of Radcliffe as his campaign manager. Those familiar with the history of both assert Radcliffe hardly could have refused, despite his New Deal alliances, because Tydings has fostered his political career.

Rites Today for Dr. Blackwell, Randolph-Macon College Head

Noted Educator, 84, Died in Atlanta; Stricken at Church Parley.

Ashland, Va., July 7.—Funeral services of Dr. R. E. Blackwell, 84, president of Randolph-Macon College and former president of the Southern Association of Colleges, will be conducted Friday at 11 a. m. in the college chapel here.

Dr. Blackwell, 84, died early today in an Atlanta, Ga., hospital. He was the oldest college president in the United States.

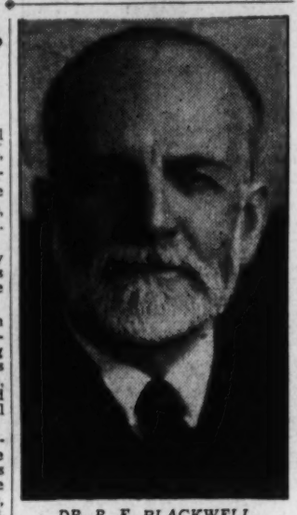
A member of the joint commission on unification of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, he was serving as a lay delegate to the church's general conference at Birmingham, Ala., when taken ill and removed to the hospital in Atlanta several weeks ago.

Dr. Blackwell was born at Warrenton, Va., November 14, 1854. He taught English to four generations at Randolph Macon, a school where he spent the greater part of his life, starting as a student at the age of 13.

He was elected vice president in 1900 and in 1902 was chosen president.

Dr. Blackwell was chairman of the Virginia Interracial Commission and at one time headed the Association of Virginia Colleges and the Southern Methodist Association of Colleges.

The holder of four honorary LL.D. degrees, and a pacemaker in liberal education, he particularly impressed fellow Virginians with those qualities of character which reminded some of Robert E. Lee. This comparison he was apt to dismiss lightly with the statement that they were alike in only one respect, both "worked for very small salaries."



DR. R. E. BLACKWELL.

Active pallbearers will be selected from members of the college faculty. The trustees of the college will be honorary pallbearers.

Surviving Dr. Blackwell are his daughter, Mrs. J. F. Messick, of Atlanta; three brothers, John Blackwell, of Louisa County, Virginia; Dr. Karl S. Blackwell, of Richmond, Va.; and Dr. Henry Blackwell, of the faculty of Randolph-Macon Woman's College at Lynchburg, Va.; and three sisters, Mrs. Charles L. Melton, of Front Royal, Va.; Mrs. Davenport Mosby, of Arkansas, and Miss Edith Blackwell, of the faculty of Sullins College, Bristol, Va.

Graft Charge Enters Dispute On Md. Bridge

By the Associated Press.

Ocean City, Md., July 7.—Dr. Charles W. Purnell, spokesman for a citizens' committee opposing present plans for a new $450,000 Sinepuxent Bay Bridge, said today that two men had advised him Ocean City residents could get the bridge located where they wanted it "by engaging a certain attorney."

The price, Dr. Purnell said he was told, would be $5,000, and would be payable only if the bridge were located as desired.

Declining to name the men, Dr. Purnell asserted he and the citizens' committee "would welcome" an investigation by the State Legislature into what he termed "a rotten mess" involved in the project.

Last night's meeting of the citizens' committee ended with a renewal of threats to seek an injunction preventing the State Roads Commission from proceeding with plans to build the new bridge at the North Division street site approved by the commission.

"It's going to be colors," Irvin Bender said. "Colors like yellow pants and blue coat, or cream coat and brown trousers."

Hagerstown Acts to Erect New City Hall

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, July 7.—The City of Hagerstown engaged a firm of Baltimore architects today to prepare plans for a new city hall necessary to make application for a P. W. A. grant after a meeting of taxpayers last night authorized the mayor and city council to take this preliminary step.

The resolution of the taxpayers also recommended that the city engage architects to prepare the plans, but that should the application of the city be approved by the Federal agency, that a mass meeting of taxpayers be held before final decision on building a new city hall is made.

Mayor W. Lee Elgin said a preliminary survey indicated that an adequate building, four stories in height, could be erected for $351,000; that the city will not have to borrow money to meet its share of the costs.

While the meeting was in session "Big Six," the city's fire alarm bell, was sounded by prearrangement to demonstrate to those present that the vibrations of the building had made necessary the purchase of three faces for the town clock within a year. The fire alarm is on top of the present city hall.

Tentative plans for the building, as announced at the meeting, call for fireproof vaults for records, storage space in the basement; first floor, collecting agencies, offices for department heads; second floor, council chamber and other offices; third floor, offices for city engineer; draughting and storage rooms; meeting room for street board and other offices; fourth floor, police department, magistrates offices, prison cells; while atop the building would be a penthouse for diplaying museum pieces, observation tower, with Little Heiskell on top. The building would be a native limestone.

This Morning..

With Shirley Povich

There's no sense denying that we are a confirmed American League die-hard. As an answer to that 4-1 pasting the Ayell athletes took from the National League All-Stars at Cincinnati the other day we have a loud and ringing "So What?"

POVICH

The National Leaguers won that won all right, but even a blind pig will find an acorn once in awhile. Six times the hand-picked stars of the two leagues have met in the All-Star game and that affair at Cincinnati was only the second time that the Nationals won. It proves simply that the American League can't win 'em all.

But it's hard to begrudge the National League its hour of triumph. That Cincinnati game was its sweetest dish since the Cardinals knocked off the American League Tigers in the 1934 World Series. The National League has been taking an awful beating for years. The American Leaguers, moreover, were rubbing it in. The situation was beginning to get oppressive for the National League.

* * * *

Kicked around something fiercely in All-Star games and World Series, the National League was plunged deep in its futility in inter-league combat. But the unkindest out of all was the Saturday Evening Post article of last spring entitled "The New Minor League—the National," and purporting to prove it.

There were a grist of arguments to show the superiority of the American League, many of them logical enough, but we never did believe that it was fair to call the National a minor league. That was overdrawing the comparison. It struck us simply that the National was not quite as good a major league as the American. We still think so.

* * * *

We think so in the face of that 4-1 affair at Cincinnati. That game was a decisive triumph for the National Leaguers. Against National League pitching, the vaunted American League power was shackled. And in contrast to flawless National League fielding, the American's stars tossed four damaging errors into the proceedings. The better team won that day.

That is baseball. Even the lowly St. Louis Browns and the Athletics rise up, on occasion, to smite down the Yankees. And the Phillies sometimes lick the Giants and the Cubs. That is one of baseball's charms—its inconsistency.

* * * *

If the same two teams that figured in the Cincinnati game were to take the field again this instant the odds would still be 8 to 5 in favor of the Americans. That is on the word of professional betting folk who figure to give themselves none the worst of it. The Americans would still figure to win.

An All-Star game really isn't a true test of the comparative skill of the two leagues. The American sluggers were stopped, 'tis true, by Johnny Vander Meer, Bill Lee and Mace Brown. Vander Meer was brilliant—for three innings. But could he go nine against the DiMaggios, the Dickeys, the Averills,, the Foxxs and the Cronins of the American League? That is a question still unanswered.

* * * *

The chances are that he could not pitch nine innings with the same success that he pitched three. Any hurler who faces a line-up of all-star sluggers is under a considerable strain that increases as the game wears on. For three innings, a pitcher can give his all without thought to conserving his strength for later developments. That is usually what gets the pitchers in the end—the strain. Under the All-Star rules, which limit pitchers to three innings, there isn't that awful tension.

The Nationals' victory was comprised of equal parts of excellent National League pitching and crude American League defensive play. National League supporters will probably make a point of that. Superior defensive play has always been their claim. But in the World Series of 1937, between the Yankees and the Giants, there were eight errors made. How many by the Giants? All eight!

* * * *

Cincinnati's All-Star game, if it proved nothing else, proved that the phenomenal luck of the Saturday Evening Post is still holding out. If the S. E. P. editors had written the script for the game, the result could have been no more pleasing to them.

To understand fully the prophetic charm of the S. E. P. we must remember that a lengthy article on Huey Long, prepared months before his assassination, was unwittingly scheduled for publication the week he was to die; that in the week of the famed Hindenberg crash the Saturday Evening Post was publishing a fantastic story of another huge Zeppelin tragedy, and that with a field of scores of top-line golf professionals to choose from for a magazine story on the eve of the 1937 National Open, The S. E. P. chose the life story of Ralph Guldahl, who forthwith obliged the editors by winning it.

* * * *

Three months ago, the S. E. P. assigned J. Roy Stockton to write a defense of the National League in rebuttal to the "New Minor League" article of Tom Meany's. Stockton's story was to bring out that the National League had the better pitching, the better defensive players and played smarter ball. It was scheduled for publication last month, but complications delayed it. The S. E. P. decided to take the risk and schedule it followjng the All-Star game which might make any defense of the National League seem laughable.

Only a decisive National League victory could justify the article. In a way, the National Leaguers were winning that ball game Wednesday for the S. E. P., and moreover, winning it in a way that the S. E. P. said it could win it.

Conversational Celebration

New York, July 7.—The long train trundled through the star-studded night, bringing the National Leaguers home in triumph. Rollicking laughter and sounds of rich rejoicing echoed through the cars, for the American League had just been conquered in the All-Star Game at Cincinnati and there was cause for celebration.

VIDMER.

But Casey Stengel, keeper of the Bees, sat staring out of the window, a pensive expression on his comically sad face.

"What's the matter, Case? Thinking about your ball club again?"

"No; I was just supposing'," Stengel said, turning with an eager light in his eye. "Look, suppose we were sitting out there this afternoon and someone said that when the gong rang every manager could run out on the field and whoever he touched he could have. That would be all right, wouldn't it?"

Everybody laughed, remembering that there were such players as Hubbell, Ott, Foxx, Gehrig, Gehringer, York, Feller, Vander Meer, Gomez, Dickey, DiMaggio, Lewis, Travis, Cronin, Hack, Herman and a host of others within reach.

* * * *

You probably would have tagged Turner and Cuccinello," someone said.

"Yeah, that would have been just about my luck," Casey moaned. He already has Turner and Cuccinello.

* * * *

"Say, that kid Vander Meer was all right, wasn't he?" Leo Durocher observed. "The only good ball they hit off him was the one Kreevich tagged in the first inning, and Ott pulled that one down."

"Yes, but I had a couple of thrills while he was going after it," laughed Terry, remembering how Ott, playing centerfield had started in, circled back and finally made a circus catch.

"I had a couple of thrills myself," Ott laughed. "I must have looked like Babe Herman on that one."

"I asked him a week ago, when the All-Star squad was chosen, if he could play centerfield for us," Terry chuckled," and he said sure he could. I guess when he was going after that one he must have figured he'd made his first mistake."

* * * *

"Well, when I saw a couple of those balls that were hit at Hack, I was just as satisfied to be in centerfield," Ott laughed, referring to a couple of drives down the third-base line where he usually plays.

Turner and Cuccinelo came through the car. They hadn't played, but Stengel, their manager, looked up and nodded.

"I was mighty proud of you boys out there today," he said, without cracking a smile. "Yes, sir. I was right proud. You didn't do a thing wrong."

* * * *

"You should have heard Danning and Hartnett down in the bullpen where I was," Jim Turner said. "They were looking over all those players out there and figuring how they would like to auction them off and split 10 per cent commission between them."

"I'd be satisfied just to have the fellows who were in the bullpen," Jimmie Wilson, manager of the Phillies put in.

* * * *

Always the Right Time

"Say, Jimmie, where's all that pep you had out there on the coaches' line?" asked Stengel, suddenly turning to Wilson. "Did you see this guy? He was all hopped up, yelling his head off."

"Well, it was the first time I've been with a team that's been ahead in so long I guess I got a little excited," Wilson grinned.

"You did all right, at that," Stengel said. "You got a watch out of it, didn't you?"

* * * *

"Now that's all right," said Stengel. "Yes, sir, that's a mighty nice watch to have, and handy too. You can sit on the bench in Philadelphia and look at it and know just when to warm up your pitchers in the bullpen."

"I don't need a watch for that," said Wilson. "It's always time to warm up a pitcher in Philadelphia."

"How would you like to have a couple of fellows warming up for you like there were in the bullpen this afternoon?" said Casey, an envious expression in his eyes. "Hubbell and Turner in one pen and Feller and Kennedy in the other. Ummm, that would be all right."

* * * *

"I remember hearing about Dizzy Dean scoring on a bunt he made against you once, Bill," Said Stengel with a sly smile.

"Now why bring that up?" asked Terry. "I remember once when we were playing you over in Brooklyn and you were so hopped up that when the game started you went out to the coaching lines and started yelling, "Come on, now, fellows. Show these guys something!" And then you suddenly looked up, and there was Joe Moore at the plate. Boy, did you look silly?"

"Aw, didn't you ever make any mistakes," Stengel asked, sheepishly.

"What were they?" he asked.

3 Golfers Tie With 140s in British Open

Cox, Busson and Burton Lead Highest Scorer by Only 8 Strokes.

By Scotty Reston.

Associated Press Sports Writer

Sandwich, England, July 7. Bill Cox, Jack Busson and Dick Burton led the field at the half-way mark of the British Open golf championship tonight but the three Ryder Cup players' pace-setting 140's were only eight shots ahead of the worst player in the field going into tomorrow's final 36 holes.

With 37 scoring 148 or better to qualify, every man in the field had at least an outside chance of winning.

Busson and Burton both clipped a stroke off the Royal St. George's course par of 70 to earn their place at the top along with Cox who put together two par 70's for his 36-hole total.

A stroke behind at 141 were Bert Gadd and Jim Adams, who scored 70 and 71, respectively, in the second round. Reginald A. Whitcombe held the 142 all by himself, a stroke ahead of a virtual unknown, R. G. French.

Favorites Disappoint.

Chief disappointments of the day were Jimmy Bruen, 18-year-old Irish Walker Cup player, and three former Open champions—Henry Cotton, Alf Padgham and Alf Perry.

Bruen, after sharing the opening day lead with a 70, fell off 10 strokes for a 36-hole total of 150 that left him outside the qualifying limit. Cotton, still sadly off his game, posted a 73 for a total of 147. Padgham was a stroke better off after a 72 and Perry was in the 145 bracket after a 74.

The bookmakers established Adams and Burton as joint favorites tonight at 4 to 1. Busson and Reginald Whitcombe were next at 5 to 1 followed by Cox and Gadd, 6 and 1; Padgham and Perry, 10 to 1, and Cotton, 12 to 1.

From the green, Cox played probably better than anybody in the field. Eight times his approaches were inside 8 feet but he couldn't sink his putts. His 70 might have been an easy 68 if they had dropped.

Drops 12-Foot Putt.

Burton, an easy swinger and long hitter, dropped a 12-footer for a deuce at the eighth to turn in 33 and came home in 36 despite three putts at the fifteenth.

Cotton, constantly off-line with his approaches, was out in 37 and only some fine approach putting coming home kept him in the running. Buren's looping back swing finally caught up with him and he was all over the course. He bogeyed himself right out of the tournament.

The finest round of the day belonged to Cyril James Hastings Tolley, the powerful amateur. Six under fours after the first 16 holes, Tolley finished with a pair of fives for a 68 that tied the amateur course record. He blew a two-foot putt on the home green.

Chisox Sign Gene Ford.

Chicago, July 7 (AP).—The White Sox announced today that Gene Ford, a right-handed pitcher, had been signed and would leave with the club for Detroit tonight. Ford had a trial with the Boston Bees last year and once pitched for the University of Iowa.

Mrs. Furlow Wins Trophy

Teal Cup Is Taken in 36-Hole Match.

Mrs. Walter Furlow, finishing 10 up on par, won the Teal Cup at Kenwood, the 36-hole match play against par tournament that was concluded yesterday.

Mrs. Furlow's feat of bettering perfect figures by ten holes, with a full handicap allowance, was five holes better than Mrs. Victor Longstreet, who finished second, five up. Mrs. Charles Mead was next, four up.

Kenwood members begin play on Saturday for the Japanese Ambessador Saito Trophy, a 72-hole medal play with handicap event.

The first two 18-hole rounds are carded Saturday and Sunday, with the semifinal and final rounds the following week, July 16 and 17.

Belloise and Dupre Rap Joey's Claim to Higher Fistic Rating

Monday Night Foe, and Persistent Challenger Hope to Prove Archibald All Wrong.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Joey Archibald's irate statement that the National Boxing Commission erred in rating him tenth on its recent featherweight list drew verbose rebuttals from two other ranking 126-pounders yesterday, both of whom are not only willing but anxious to get said Archibald in a well-lighted ring some night and prove the N. B. A. correct.

One was Mr. Michael Belloise, the New York fisticuffer, who meets Joey Monday night at the Stadium in a ten-round sprint. The other was Tony Dupre, the New England raprier, who has camped on Archibald's trail so long he has been mistaken for his shadow. What they had to say about Joey's complaint was not only plenty but highly uncomplimentary to his fighting ability.

Speaking through his agent and mouthpiece, Mr. Charley Johnston, Belloise promised to put Archibald in the hay within five rounds come Monday, or acknowledge himself a has-been. In an oily tone Mr. Johnston inquired what license a bum like Archibald had to complain about being tenth on the list?

"I'll admit the N. B. A. made a mistake," Johnston told Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn via long distance telephone, "but it was mistake in his favor. They should have left him off completely. In my estimation he not only can't fight, but he can't box. He has a nice looking mug, and he poses well, but this isn't any picture-taking contest, it's fighting—and he not only can't fight but won't even try.

"If Belloise doesn't put the sandman in his eyes by the fifth Monday night you can keep our end of the purse, and I'll pay our own freight in the bargain. This, to me, is one of the softest touches we've ever had. Why, Mike loves this Archibald like a brother—a step brother—and he'll get him out of there so quick the fans will think he had on skates."

Dupre, a more mild-mannered lad piloted by an equally mild-mannered manager, merely remarked that he'd like to meet the winner, and he hoped it would be Archibald. Tony's been after Archibald for a year, now, and the Providence pugilist still shows no inclination to meet him even socilly.

Al LeFebvre, Tony's manager, wired Ahearn yesterday to count him in on the elimination tournament and, if possible, book him for the winner of the first bout. He thinks Belloise would be a trifle tougher than Archibald for his boy, but not too tough to be taken.

What both men have overlooked, perhaps, that in Washington, at least, Archibald is a pretty fair fighter. There was a night in New York—In the semifinal bout of the Lou Ambers-Tony Canzoneri card, to be exact, that he looked good, too. That was the night he lost to Sixto Escobar by a technical knockout in the third round, after putting the bantam champion on the carpet three times. A cut eye won for Sixto.

It's beginning to look as though it may be a fairly bloody battle.

Griffs Face Macks Today

Ferrell or Kelley May Battle Smith.

For the first time since April 20—the third game of the season—Connie Mack's Athletics will make their appearance at Griffith Stadium today.

It is a vastly different Philadelphia team that is scheduled for a four-game series with the Nats. The acquisition of two rookies—Outfielder Sam Chapman and First Baseman Dick Siebert—has fired the Athletics with new ambition and new effectiveness.

Washington fans will be gazing upon Chapman for the first time. The rugged former California fullback who was slated to play professional football with the Redskins until he began to splurge in big league baseball, already is tabbed as one of the rookie "finds" of the season.

Chapman, due to his long-distance hitting and exceptional fielding, has been a fixture in Mack's outfield from the day he reported from the campus. His performances have enabled Mack to shift the slugging Bob Johnson to centerfield.

Siebert, bought by Mack from the Cardinal chain system after the player protested to Landis that the Cardinals were keeping him out of the big leagues, has ably filled the Athletics' first-base vacancy.

Manager Bucky Harris will send either Wes Ferrell or Harry Kelley to the mound today. Three off-days due to the All-Star game have given Harris a completely rested pitching staff. Manager Mack is expected to send the Southpaw Edgar Smith to the box.

Eunice Dean Wins Way To Women's Semifinals

Philadelphia, July 7 (U.P.).—Eunice Dean, of San Antonio, Tex., entered the semifinal round of the Women's Middle States Grass Court tennis tourney today by defeating the favored Hope Knowles, of Philadelphia, 2—6, 6—4, 6—4.

Other seeded players continued to the semifinals. Helen Pedersen, Stamford, Conn., seeded No. 1, defeated Marilynn McCrea, Little Rock, Ark., 6—0, 6—2. Millicent Hirsh, New York, No. 3, eliminated Cecelia Riegel, Germantown, 6—1, 6—1. Theo Smith, Pasadena, Calif., No. 4, defeated Pat Cummings, Westfield, N. J., victor over defending champion Alison Harrison in the tourney's major upset. Miss Smith won easily, 6—2, 6—3.

Tremont Beats Phillies.

Tremont, Pa., July 7 (AP).—Lester Hinckle pitched and batted Tremont, of the semi-pro Lebanon Valley League, to a 2-to-1 victory over the Phillies today.

New Owner Plans to Rest Injured Star

E. E. Fogelson to Race Stallion in California; Lawrin Goes Lame.

By the Associated Press.

Inglewood, Calif., July 7.—Dauber, ailing Preakness winner, was reported sold for $40,000 today while his arch rival, Lawrin, Kentucky Derby champion, joined him on the shelf.

Although a bowed tendon forced Dauber out of the $50,000 3-year-old stakes at Hollywood Park last week E. E. Fogelson, Texas oil man, has agreed to pay William C. duPont's Foxcatcher Farms $40,000 for the chestnut stallion, it was learned.

Fogelson plans to keep Dauber inactive for at least three months, then train him slowly for the winter season at Santa Anita, with its $100,000 handicap.

Lawrin, winner of last week's rich stakes, pulled up yesterday with what Trainer Ben Jones described as the same kind of leg injury that befell Dauber. He blamed the frequent watering of the track for the mishaps.

Jones won't be sure until possibly tomorrow how long Lawrin will be out of competition, but offered to bet "1,000 to 1" that his big colt would not go near the Hollwood $50,000 Gold Cup Handicap July 16, much less the Hollywood $15,000 Derby this Saturday.

Herbert M. Woolf, Lawrin's wealthy owner, dismissed the injury as "one of those things" and said he hoped to have his colt back in the running as soon as possible.

Nueland Scores A Hole-in-One.

Fred J. Nueland made a hole-in-one yesterday at Congressional or at least a half a one—as his tee shot found the cup on the 16½ hole, in company of D. C. Beelar, Pat Flaherty and Al Nader.

The hole is a short one of some 100 yards, located between the sixteenth and seventeenth holes, and is played to relieve the congestion and to save a wait on the seventeenth tee. And, as in yesterday's case, is used to settle side wagers.

Long Key Is Favorite In Hambletonian Stake

Cleveland, July 7 (AP).—Long Key, lightning fast bay colt, owned by J. Merkle, of Columbus, Ohio, and driven by the magician of the Futurities, Ben F. White, today became the odds-on favorite to win the classic Hambletonian Stakes by easily capturing the $6,185 Championship Stallion Stake at the North Randall Race Track's Grand Circuit meeting.

Champlain took the first mile heat in 2:01 4-5, but Long Key came back to win the second and third in 2:01 3-5 and 2:02.

Bees Send 2 Yearlings To Hartford Farm Club

Boston, July 7 (U.P.).—The Boston Bees tonight sent two of their first-yearlings to the Farm Club at Hartford, Conn., Secretary John J. Quinn announced.

Robert Kahle, 22-year-old prodigy infielder, came from the Indianapolis Club last fall after he batted .306, was sent to Hartford until his sore arm mends. He was sent on a 24-hour recall option. Kahle's arm has bothered him since the season opened.

Big-Timers Wouldn't Miss an All-Star Game!

By Alan Gould.

Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, July 7.—All-Star baseball echoes: Most talk you hear about the reluctance of players to risk themselves, for the annual charity game, is so much thin-sliced boloney . . . Vernon Kennedy, Detroit right-handed pitching ace and one-time collegiate decathlon king in track and field competition, summed it up: "Beefing is part of baseball, but don't make any mistakes about these fellows—they are all proud to be picked for the All-Star show . . . To prove that, just pass up some of the standouts some time and then litsen to their squawks." . . .

* * * *

Bill Terry, who gained his first victory over the American League since the 1933 World Series, was happiest over out-smarting his foes . . . Best National League strategy, however, was Joe Medwick's tumbling one-hand catch of Bill Dickey's line drive in the ninth . . . "That," remarked Casey Stengel, "was the ball game" . . . Cincinnati's handling of big game set new high for all-around class, color and efficiency, including press arrangements handled by Tom Swope . . . International League is toying with idea of conducting midseason All-Star frolic, possibly along lines of American Association, which pits picked squad against club leading circuit after July Fourth . . .

They're feting John Edward Wray in St. Louis tonight in honor of his sixty-fifth birthday and 30 years as sports editor of the Post-Dispatch . . . This corner salutes him as one of the ablest and best-liked men in this dizzy business. . . .

Apropos of the Navy captain's dissent to Harvard's national rowing championship claims, carried in this column, comes this rebuttal from Reginald Kernan, member of the Crimson's 1937 varsity crew and brother of the No. 4 in this year's unbeaten boatload: "(1) Five members of the Harvard boat had divisional exams during the ten days preceding the Navy race; (2) Stroke Chace rowed the Navy race in considerable pain, due to the condition for which he was operated on the following day; (3) Buck Walsh, the Navy coach, was in Cambridge to have a look around when Harvard met Cornell the Saturday before the Navy-Harvard race. I talked to him and watched him and no matter what Ensign Yeates thinks, he (Walsh) wasn't even close to thinking his crew could 'have torn Harvard up' that day; (4) if Navy's normal speed is consistently 32 with spacing from 8 to 10 feet, they are the first super-crew of this century and should never lose a race; (5) Ensign Yates says he is not given to bragging but he betrays himself when he says that his Poughkeepsie crew could have beaten Harvard easily at 4 miles. Their victory over California, magnificent as it was, was by no means easy . . .

* * * *

"Harvard's crew quite possibly may have seemed pampered at Annapolis because of their taxi escapade (taking taxis up to the start and having their shell towed up) which was carried out at Spike Chace's suggestion as a good gag, rather than from any desire to conserve strength. I think Yeates has something to say for his side but * * * one or two of his flat assertions would give pain to anyone who saw this year's Harvard varsity in action . . ."

Top Seeded Netters Win in Women's Play

Outdoors
With Bill Ackerman.

Odd fish, as well as record fish, seem to rate the banners today in place of the ordinary run of sport fish.

ACKERMAN

First noted was a trigger-fish taken in a pound net in Herring Bay. How it ever strayed so far from its tropical reefs is more than we'll ever be able to say. This fish, remarkable for the trigger-like looking spines of the dorsal, can lock the heavy forward one to withstand any pressure, but a slight touch on the second one will release it instantly.

It would be to much to hope that this fish wa possibly one of the vanguard that would bring back to bay waters the schools of Spanish mackerel so prevalent around the mouth of the Patuxent last season.

• • • •

The 6-foot shark, hooked by George Cook, Benny Dement, Doug and Jack Watson far up the Patuxent in the neighborhood of Sandgate, while fishing for the succulent spot. Needless to say he tied their tackle in knots.

• • • •

From Capt. George Sheaf at Boynton, Fla., from whom we get a report, only when he makes a catch really worth talking about—news of a sailfish measuring 9 feet 1½ inches. According to him, the longest ever taken on the Atlantic Coast, and, looking over our records, it seems to be true. Any of the Florida clubs pay off with a gold button for a sail that measures but 8 feet. The record Atlantic sailfish, weighing 106 pounds was less than 9 feet in length, while the one weighing 116 pounds, caught by Hemingway and McGrath near Key West, was but three quarters of an inch over the mark. Yet this sailfish with the heroic length weighed but 65 pounds.

The various events in the Solomons Island Regatta on July 23 and 24 are rapidly receiving entrants from almost every section of the country. John Charles Thomas has assured Ted Gardiner he will be here with every one of his racing craft. Fred Orme is building a new 225 cubic inch hydroplane which is expected to be ready for this event that comes on Sunday, the second day of the regatta.

There will be a class for 135 cubic inch hydroplanes, which wasn't run last year. The racing daughters of Commodore Tyson will be back again with their midget outboards, as will Douglas Fonda and Fred Jacoby, outstanding stars of the 1937 season and respectively champions in their classes, amateur and professional.

Gray Goose, the 225 that George Gingras, of Rockledge, Fla., brought in ahead of the pack during the Southern racing season, and broke the world's record for straight mile trials, is entered, as well as many others of the top flight.

From Ocean City, news of plenty of bluefish, running up to about 6 pounds in weight. Congressman Frank W. Boykin, of Alabama, and his party hit them to the tune of well over a hundred last Sunday, fishing with Capt. Red Hall on his Cutty Sark.

Capt. Lev Raymond, dean of the Atlantic City Tuna Club fleet, running out of Ocean City this season, is anxious to get offshore to prove that this fast growing sportfishing point need depend, not only on the white marlin and mako to provide piscatorial thrills. The tough weather and low temperature of the water has been the means of holding the fish off in the stream.

Even so, Jack Townsend fishing over the week-end with Capt. Bill Hatch, had one of the white billfish on for 12 jumps, and beaten so bad Paul Townsend was betting it was in the boat, but—it shook off.

Paul goes to the Elco plant at Bayonne next week to get the new Jacpau III, built solely to fish the stretam—at this point some 54 miles off. Originally it was planned to shake her down with a run to Montauk, but the season is to close upon them, and it is very likely she'll be berthed in the Basin before another week-end.

A letter from Alexander H. Kerr, secretary of the Southern California Skeet Association, who, while complimenting George Deyoe on his record-breaking shooting at the recent North-South shoot of the National Capital Skeet Club, gives local shots an invitation to come out there if they would like to get in some really tough individual competition.

And it seems as though he might be right, for in the Southern California championships there were five 100 straights, while two other registered shoots produced four 100 straights each.

Misses Ellis And O'Steen Are Victors

Mrs. Robinson Forced to 3 Sets to Defeat Margo Lee.

By Jack Munhall.

Play again ran true to prediction in the District of Columbia's women's tennis championships at Columbia yesterday when Mrs. Margaret Robinson, Ann Ellis and Willie O'Steen, seeded second, third and fourth respectively, joined Defending Champion Edith Clarke in the semifinal round.

Only the veteran Mrs. Robinson was carried into three sets as the trio bowled over unranked foes. Mrs. Robinson was forced to come from behind to defeat youthful Margo Lee in three sets, 2—6, 6—1, 7—5. Miss Lee played excellent tennis in capturing the first chapter from her heavily-favored opponents but weakened rapidly under the heat of the torrid sun and an equally torrid rally by Mrs. Robinson.

Miss Lee, after allowing Mrs. Robinson to square the match in the second set appeared on the way to victory in the third when she held a lead of 4—2. She was unable to hold this advantage, however and Mrs. Robinson overhauled her and proved a stronger player in the stretch.

Miss O'Steen turned back Hazel Bishop in two hard-fought sets, 6—6, 7—5, and Miss Ellis had things her own way in thrashing Anna Dayette, 6—4, 6—0.

In the consolation round play reached the semifinals. And into that round went Gertrude Smith, who beat Kathleen Klotz, 6—4, 8—6; Eleanor Fishburne, who outclassed Johanna Zetlmeier, 9—7, 6—3; Dorothy Bender, who downed Doris Rothwell, 6—1, 6—3, and Charlotte Decker, who defeated Mrs. Margaret Graham, 7—5, 6—1.

Mrs. Graham, in a previous match yesterday, had gained the quarter-finals by eliminating Frances Carter, 2—6, 6—4, 8—6.

Doubles opened yesterday, and the No. 1 seeded team of Edith Clarke and Mrs. Margaret Robinson did nothing to bely their ranking. They beat off the game challenge of youthful Franes Carter and Lisa Bloede to win, 6—1, 6—2.

Edna Vest and Miss Pritchard were doubles winners, and moved Favorites Win.

Empire City Race Track, Yonkers, N. Y., July 7 (AP).—Backers of odds-on favorites had a merry time of it here this afternoon. They started off with Hope to Do, at 9 to 20, in the third race, followed up with Smart Crack, at 3 to 5, in the fourth, and then, in the featured Whitestone Purse, for 3-year-olds at a mile and 70 yards, they saw the Woodland Farm's Opera Hat score by a half length to pay 9 to 20.

'Dusek Days' Are Here Again! And It Looks Like an Epidemic

O'Mahoney Will Be Brought in to Curb the Spread but There's Not Much to Be Done.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Official notice yesterday was issued from the office of Hon. Joe Turner, Esq., District custodian of wrestlers and incidental public nuisances, that Dusek days are here again, along with the annual hat wave, fido period, and week-ends at the beach. A list of precautionary measures also were issued to combat the menace.

Hon. Turner noted that it is the first time in several years that the Dusek malady has been detected in this vicinity. It was prevelant several years ago before he took action to eradicate the ailment, commonly referred to as Dementia Dusekiae. The toll was heavy. Thousands of persons were afflicted and the Dementia flourished.

Only one case has been reported Turner's office, it is proud to rethus far this summer, but Hon. port, swung quickly into action and succeeded in curbing it. That was last Thursday at Griffith Stadium where some 1,500 fans admitted to feeling the old Dusek fever. Joe Dusek was found to be the cause of the wholesale public disturbance.

Hon. Turner's office ordered the application of an anti dote selling under the trade name of Danno (What, again?) O'Mahony. Unfortunately this is not available at even the best drug stores, but only at the ball park on Thursday nights It must be consumed in mild doses to obtain the best results. It is dispensed in neither liquid nor capsule form, but in pound quantities only. Treatments range from $1.15 (mild cases) to $2.65, serious disorders, usually incurable.

Last week's application did the work in exactly 35 minutes, surprising Hon. Turner's office, and even the medicine. With an outbreak anticipated next Thursday night at the Stadium in the person of Ernie Dusek, the Custodian of W. and I. P. N.'s has ordered another supply of the O'Mahoney serum laid in for possible use.

The Ernie Dusek type of the malady is reputedly much worse and more troublesome than the Joe brand, and Hon. Turner (and office) expect more difficulty controlling its spread. Turner warns that the following symptoms indicate the presence of the ailment, and gives simple, home remedies for treatment:

(A) Strong urge to hurl peanuts, pop bottles, or any other handy object at Dusek;

(B) Similar urge to call Dusek "Big bum," or (if no ladies in party, ℔*!@:&;x*Z&* Big Bum.)

(C) Even stronger urge to call both ailment and anti-dote a couple of big bums.

Remedies.

(A) Go to stadium and hurl peanuts, pop bottles, or any other handy objects at Dusek (but beware of gendarmes who are in league with them.)

(B) Follow urge to call Dusek "Big Bum."

(C) Follow urge to call both ailment and anti-dote a couple of big bums (not recommended for gents under 125 pounds and slow of foot.)

Public Links Dates Moved

Dates for the city public links championship were moved back one day yesterday by Dave Herman, local public links representative of the United States Golf Association, to Wednesday and Thursday, July 27 and 28 instead of the original dates, July 26 and 27.

The Maryland Open Championship at Congressional is carded on the 26th and although it would not directly interfere with the municipal championship, Herman moved the dates back to an open date on the local golf calendar, to avoid any conflict.

The closing date for the entries was also moved back, to Saturday, July 23. With the tournament nearly three weeks off, the entries received thus far point to a record breaking field that will seek the four places to the National Championship in Cleveland, as representatives of the local Harding Cup team. East Potomac has been selected for the qualifying rounds.

5,000 to Bait Lines at Fair

By the Associated Press

Rock Hall, Md., July 7.—Rock Hall residents, hosts to this year's Chesapeake Bay Fishing Fair Grand Contest, have started preparations for a swarm of 5,000 anglers expected to bait for the big ones here next month.

The annual grand contest, largest convention of anglers in the Nation, will be a two-day affair, August 27-28, most of which time fishermen will spend on the water. But Rock Hall also is preparing to entertain visitors with programs on land.

About 30 trophies and 100 prizes will be distributed to winning fishermen in a score of contests. In the past, catches during the contest have been as varied as the fishermen, with the "take" including croakers, rock, sea trout, perch, Norfolk spot, kingfish, red channel bass and other species.

Last year's fair, at Solomons, attracted fishermen from 12 States. It was the second annual event sponsored by the Bay Fishing Fair Association, organized in 1936 to advertise the Bay's fishing grounds.

'Peg' Hanna's James A. Wins Powder House Handicap at Delaware

D. C. Horse Pays $13.90 Win Ticket

Beats Sun Egret Home by ¾ of a Length in 6 Furlong Dash

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Delaware Park, Stanton, Del., July 7—The old gold, black and red colors of R. L. (Peg) Hanna, of Washington, familiar to patrons of Charles Town, Hagerstown and Marlboro, forged to the wire today in front of some of turfdom's proudest silks in the $2,000 Powder House Handicap, feature of the local program.

James A., a 5-year-old gelded son of Boo, claimed by Hanna in Florida last winter, ran a smashing race to lead the great Sun Egret to the finish line by three-quarters of a length in a fast 6-furlong dash. The winner, carrying 106 pounds to the 120 pounds assigned Sun Egret, ran the three-quarters of mile in 1:12, two-fifths of a second above the track record.

With Washingtonians prominent among his backers, James A. paid a $13.90 mutuel and was excellently handled by Hilton Dabson, Maryland boy.

James A. did not have the best of the start and had to be rushed to a forward position. He had plenty of challengers in the early stages, once losing the lead to Bull Whip. However, Dabson went to the whip in the stretch and opened a lead. He had to keep pounding, however, for Sun Egret came with a rush nearing the wire.

Ferdelance, trained by S. L. Burch, of Washington, made a show of his field in the first race of his career. The 3-year-old gelding was in hand while winning by two lengths from Equerry, owned by H. Rozier Dulaney, jr., another Washingtonian. Rocky Meadow was third in the field of a dozen nonwinners. Ferdelance was best heavily in the closing minutes and paid $10.20.

Robert Harman Eliminates Hunt in Intercollegiate Tennis Play

Fifth Seeded Netter Bows 5-7, 6-2, 6-2

Guernsey, Witherell and Lewis Also Victors at Haverford.

By the Associated Press.

Haverford, Pa., July 7.—Top-seeded Joseph Hunt, of Southern California, was knocked out of the National Intercollegiate Tennis Singles Championship today at the Merion Cricket Club.

Hunt, ranked fifth nationally, bowed to Robert Harman, of the University of California, 5—7, 6—2, 6—2, in the second surprise of the tournament. Monday second-seeded Don McNeill, of Kenyon College, was beaten.

Accompanying Harman into the round of four were Frank Guernsey, jr., of Rice Institute, Texas, who defeated his neighbor, Robert Kamrath, University of Texas, 5—7, 6—2, 6—1; Lewis Wetherell, of Southern California, and Morey Lewis, of Kenyon College.

Wetherell staggered through three sets to conquer Chester Murphy, one of the University of Chicago twins, 1—6, 7—5, 6—4, and Lewis scored his second upset in two days by beating William Murphy, the other Chicago twin, 6—2, 2—6, 6—2. Yesterday Lewis defeated fourth seeded Julius Heldman, of Southern California.

Championship shots and mannerisms stuck out all over Hunt against the laboring Harman, but for every brilliant shot Hunt put over, he followed with there or four poor ones. Harman scored point after point with a blistering forehand drive that forced Hunt off the court to return. Both players had plenty of depth, but in the long rallies, Harman proved the steadier. In the second Hunt began to show signs of exhaustion.

Lewis won over Murphy by his doggedness. He was the steadier in the raliles and conducted himself well at net.

Cleveland Raises Humphries' Pay.

Cleveland, July 7 (AP).—The Cleveland Baseball Club disclosed today it had torn up the 1938 contract of Johnny Humphries, outstanding rookie pitcher, and replaced it with a new one good for the remainder of this season and all of 1939.

The club said it had given Humphries an advance in salary because of his effective relief pitching. The Clifton Forge, Va., right-hander has participated in 14 games this year, mostly in a relief role. Of the six games in which he has figured for the averages, he has won four and lost two.

The Indians' management was silent on terms of the new contract, but sports writers speculated it probably raised his salary from about $4,000 to perhaps $6,000 a year.

Man Jumps Off Bridge, Drowns As 3 Try Rescue

Although three men dived in the Potomac River in an effort to save him, a man believed to be Percy William Tarman, 24, of the 200 block of D street northwest, jumped to his death from Key Bridge early last night.

According to police, Leonard Kelly, 21, CCC youth of Rossyln, Va., and William King, of the 3400 block of Prospect street northwest, saw the man leap from the bridge and jumped in to save him. Benjamin Kirpnicki, 19, another CCC enrollee, also dived into the river in a rescue attempt.

Papers found on the bridge were addressed to Tarman. The landlady at the house where he boarded said he had often spoken of suicide.

All-Star Game Was Best-Hurled Contest in Inter-Loop Series

Pitchers on Both Sides Did Well—and It's a Good Thing for the Sport That Nationals Won.

By Rud Rennie.
Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, July 7.—The National League's victory in the All-Star game has had the effect of a magic salve. It has healed all wounds, avenged honor and refurnished a dulled prestige.

If the National League had not, by years of indifference to the All-Star game, laid itself open to severe criticism, the effect of its 4-to-1 victory over the American Leaguers in Cincinnati Wednesday would not have had the same grand and glorious importance.

The victory would not have been a vindication of anything. It merely would have been the National League's second success in six games. And the chances are that greater stress would have been laid upon the fact that the American Leaguers kicked away the ball game.

But it is a fine thing for baseball that the National League won. It is not healthy for any sport to have one team or one league on a pedestal too long.

Three American League errors—one by Joe Cronin, the shortstop, in the first inning, and two in the seventh inning, which were charged against Jimmy Foxx, the third baseman, and Joe DiMaggio, the right-fielder, but which were really due to the negligence of Charley Gehringer, the second baseman, in not covering first base on a bunt, made it possible for the National League to win in nine innings.

In the matter of earned runs, the teams were even, each having one. What a contest it would have been if the American League had played the same errorless brand of ball displayed by the National League!

Considering the game for a moment from its earned run status for the purpose of paying compliments to the pitchers, one can say that this was by far the best pitched All-Star game of any thus far played. For sustained effectiveness, the six pitchers who worked on Wednesday turned in the best of all performances.

Johnny Vander Meer, the idol of Cincinnati, who wrote a new page in the history of baseball by pitching two no-hit games in succession last month, was marvelous in the difficult role of starting a game for the National League in his first year in a major league.

Bill Lee, of Chicago, who pitched the middle three innings for the National League, would have been just as effective as Vander Meer if he had not issued a base on balls. Only one trick hit was made off each pitcher. Players say Lee never pitched so well in his life as he did on Wednesday.

Mace Brown, the Pirates' wonderful relief pitcher, was the only one of the three National League hurlers who was in jeopardy while he was pitching.

It looks like a National League year. The older circuit has kicked off its carpet slippers and gone out to challenge the American League's right to all the plaudits. It is the best thing that could have happened.

'Television' Fails To Do Job for D.C. Reader of Meters

Television for general use hasn't been perfected yet, but that didn't deter a District water-meter reader from a novel experiment.

He sat at home and read the meters on his regular beat, while reading his favorite detective story, it was related yesterday at the District Building.

As a result, an Army man who had closed his home for several months returned to find an "amazing bill." In another case, an expert who happens to work for the Bureau of Standards, compared his readings with that on his bill and complained to the Water Department.

The penalty: A week's suspension without pay, and the meter-reader was shifted to night duty.

Borah Ill But Better; Wife Is at Bedside

Senator William E. Borah (Republican), of Idaho, remained in bed yesterday, but was "very much better," his wife said last night. She reached here from their home in Boise, Idaho.

The 73-year-old Senator, Mrs. Borah said, was confined to his bed by "just being tired and overworked."

Metropolis Building Group Elects Heads

Assets Exceed $5,750,000 and Profits Total $550,000.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Stockholders of Metropolis Building Association at their meeting this week formally elected all officers and directors nominated in June. R. W. Santelmann, treasurer, reported total assets in excess of $5,750,000 with undivided surplus and profits of $550,000. Activity for the first six months was reported ahead of the corresponding period of 1937, and there has been no lull in the demand for loans on properties. Indications point to 1938 being a banner year, it was stated.

The association, announced as second only to Oriental Building Association in point of age, was established in 1866. Harry G. Wilson continues as president, John Scrivener, vice president; Edward A. Tripp, secretary, and Rudolph W. Santelmann, treasurer. These officers, together with George A. Siebert, William A. Simpson, Henry M. Wiegand, Martin T. Wiegand, Arthur Seagren, Harry H. Wilson and Henry E. Tripp, compose the board of directors.

Gatley Career.

Albert S. Gatley, executive vice president of Lincoln National Bank, for 28 years treasurer of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, and recently elected District vice president for the national bank division of the American Bankers Association, began his banking career as a messenger.

A native Washingtonian, Mr. Gatley after being educated in the public schools, worked for the Palais Royal and later for Woodward & Lothrop. He entered service of Lincoln National Bank shortly before its opening day, March 25, 1890, and has worked in practically all of its departments, becoming cashier of the institution in 1906, and vice president in 1922.

Mr. Gatley was one of the organizers of the Dime Savings Bank, forerunner of the Bank of Commerce & Savings, and has served on the directorate and finance committee of the latter institution since its inception. He is a brother of H. Prescott Gatley, president of National Savings & Trust Co.

Logan Motor Company

Frank K. Logan, owner of Logan Motor Co., a local Ford dealership, reports that his business has shown approximately a 30 per cent increase over the same period of 1937 in all departments including new and used cars, parts, gasoline and labor sales. Moving of used cars has been much easier this year than in previous years, he states, and profits have been very good in spite of increases in taxes.

Mr. Logan attributes the increase in volume and profits of his business to an energetic promotion of sales together with careful selection of personnel to accomplish various objectives. He believes if businesses would take an aggressive attitude and spend the same amount of money and energy toward promotion of sales that they did last year, all would experience substantial upturns. Ralph H. Dillon, manager of the organization, states that business has been a little harder to get than last year but more profitable after it is obtained.

Washington Loan and Trust.

After the regular monthly meeting of the board of directors of the Washington Loan and Trust Co. this week, Harry G. Meem, president, announced that a quarterly dividend of 2 per cent had been declared, payable on August 1 to stockholders of record on July 22. As usual, books will be closed to any transfer of stock after that date until August 2. Mr. Meem stated that business during the last three months had been satisfactory, with a gratifying increase in loans and decrease of idle funds. The meeting was the 600th since the organization of the board in 1889.

Local Salesmen Honored.

Two local salesmen received honors for making high selling records during the week ended on Father's Day, which was known as "Challenge Week" by several hundred star salesmen of utilities, distributors and dealers handling the gas-operated and kerosene-operated household refrigerators manufactured by Servel, Inc., according to information received from George S. Jones, jr., vice president and general sales manager of the company. The local salesmen named for record sales during the week were T. M. Dodson and J. B. Helbert, both of Washington Gas Light Co.

Banking Notes.

Wheat Prices Close Lower With Securities

Loss of a Cent a Bushel Follows Gain of the Same Amount.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 7.—Reacting in line with securities, the Chicago wheat market late today transformed into losses of about a cent a bushel an earlier equal gain.

Contributing to the late setback here was the fact that Russian and Argentine shipments of wheat showed a good sized increase, whereas North American exports continued light, approximately 250,000 bushels. Disquieting advances relative to black rust came from the Dakotas and Saskatchewan, but were discontinued by cool weather prospects.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures stood ⅝@⅞ lower compared with yesterday's finish, July 71@71⅛, September 72½@72⅝; corn ⅛ off to ⅛ up, July 57⅜, September 59⅛@59¼; oats at ¼ decline to ¼ advance; rye ⅛@⅜ down, and provisions varying from 2 cents setback to 17 cents bulge.

The Market

By C. Norman Stabler, A Special Correspondent.

Stock Advances Are Cut With Profit-Taking as New Record Volume for Year Is Established.

New York, July 7.—The stock market got off to a start today reminiscent of the boom days of the late 1920's but after an hour in which prices jumped ahead on blocks of several thousand shares the resistance increased and gains were lost. Judged by the composite average there was a minor loss for the day, amounting to 0.07 point, but before this was accomplished 216 individual issues had established new highs for the year.

The volume on the big board of 2,775,420 shares was at a new high for the year, the ticker at one time had been forced seven minutes behind floor quotations and there was more speculation in railroad issues than had been seen for months.

Rails Lead Rally.

It was the rails that touched off the big market. Overnight announcement that Eastern carriers may increase passenger fares for an experimental period of 18 months buoyed the entire carrier list and most of the leading ones went to their best prices for 1938. Moreover this group did not suffer as severely as the industrials in the late reaction.

In most cases the highs made during the first half-hour were the highs for the day. When the rail following quieted down the bullish forces turned to other groups in an effort to continue the rally. Metals, steel and aviation issues were taken in hand but support was insufficient to offset profit taking sales.

Reaction Is Expected.

Chartists and technicians detect increasing resistance in the market and the ranks of those who are expecting a reaction are increasing. These technicians feel that a setback of from 25 to 35 per cent would give an accurate reflection of the hoped-for business improvement this fall.

The above-mentioned composite average today reached a new high for the year, and, of course, was at a new high for the current recovery. Industrials went through their former top, but the rails are still 2½ points under their year's top.

Concentration of the early trading on the railroad issues was shown by some of the opening blocks. New York Central appeared with 10,000 shares at 19, up 1¾, Pennsylvania opened with 3,500 shares at 22½, up 2⅞, and Baltimore & Ohio opened with 3,000 shares at 10⅜, up a point. Apparently on the basis that higher passenger fares would throw extra business to the bus lines, Greyhound opened with 10,000 shares at 14¼, up 1½, and at a new high. Central was the day's most active stock, holding ¾ point advance, and Greyhound was next with a gain of 1⅛. Southern Pacific was actively traded but closed down a small fraction.

Steels Close Down.

Steels were taken care of in the morning bluge but most of them closed down for the day, United States Steel losing a fraction along with Republic and Bethlehem closing down 1⅛.

The street was cheered by the reception given the Standard Oil of New Jersey offering of $81,000,000 in new securities. The debentures and notes went to a premium in the counter market.

Metals were under pressure in the late sell-off, American Smelting and Anaconda losing a point each and Nickel a fraction. Union Carbide closed down 1¼, Harvester 2, duPont 1⅜ and Woolworth a point. Allied Chemical held a 2½ point gain and there were small advances in Consolidated Edison, Loew's, Electric Power & Light, North American Aviation and Douglas.

Fare Boost Aids Bonds.

Bonds of the large Eastern passenger-carrying railroads were active and sharply higher in the listed market today, owing to the I. C. C. permission for increases of fares to 2½ cents a mile. Other railroad bonds were firm. Local traction bonds were a strong point, as the moves toward unification are producing hopefulness. Money market bonds were dull, while foreign dollar issues remained idle.

Turnover in all bonds was $12,500,000, against only $7,370,000 the previous day.

B. & O. In the Lead.

Baltimore & Ohio, New York Central and similar issues were in the van of the upswing in rails. B. & O. bonds were aidded additionally by the application for another RFC loan. New Haven, Erie and other default bonds were almost equally strong, since these carriers will benefit from the fare advance. Secondary liens of the Pennsylvania moved steadily upward. The rail group as a whole was stimulated, and only a few issues failed to advance, Southern Railway bonds among them.

Interborough and B. M. T. moved up 1 to 4 points as Albany conferees moved for exemption of $315,000,000 New York City bonds from the debt limit for unification purposes. Speculative industrial issues were in excellent demand. Rail holding issues were marked upward, and some of the utility holding bonds also did well. Western Union bonds advanced, but Postal Telegraph 5s were dull. International Telephone obligations remained firm.

Treasury Issues Steady.

Long-term United States Treasury issues showed only smallest fractional variations in either direction. Guaranteed bonds of the farm and home corporations also were quiet. Best rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds remained virtually motionless, as attention was centered on the several new flotations, which were well received.

Foreigns Are Firm.

Latin-American default issues showed a degree of firmness, but buying remained spotty. German and Austrian bonds were dull, and other European default obligations were neglected. The Italian and Japanese groups drifted lower. Canadian bonds were active in the high-grade group, while Australians were well supported. Norwegians dropped fractionally.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, July 7.—Institutional purchasing of British funds, coupled with the sharp advance in American shares, gave the stock market a firm tone today. Rubber shares were in demand and tobacco and all metal groups closed higher. Although traffic receipts were smaller, domestic rails showed a firmer tendency, and the oil and mining issues also moved upward. Fractional reactions from top prices of the day took place near the close.

Paris.—Securities slid off in the late dealings in the bourse and trading was active. Bank of France shares were weak and lost 635 francs net, and French rentes were down 45 to 60 centimes at the finish. Suez Canal was off 100 francs, compared with Wednesday close, and Royal Dutch declined 40 francs.

Liverpool.—Cotton futures gained 6 to 8 points following Wednesday's firmness at New York. Local buying and continued strength in stock prices also influenced traders. Profit-taking caused partial reactions at the close. Higher North American markets yesterday, a sale of two cargoes of Australian flour to the Orient and steady shippers' offers caused wheat futures here to advance and close ¼d to 1½d net higher.

Golf in Gas Masks Banned by Britain

London, July 7.—A "golf tournament in gas masks" which was to have taken place tomorrow in Middlesex has been canceled at the request of the government's air raids precaution committee, which considers such an affair lacking in dignity. However, "gas mask teas" and door-to-door calls by gas mask instructors are being sanctioned to educate the public to the menace of air raids.

"The Timid Soul" by Webster Appears in Sunday's Post.

Bob Burns Says—

The other day, I went to a "high falutin'" debate held in a city school out here and I didn't understand a word they said and it just made me think, with pride, of the last debate I heard in the school down home.

The subject was "resolved that the horse is a more useful animal than the cow." After the horse side sat down, a tall, lanky boy got up and says "Honorable judges—we admit everything our opponent said in favor of the horse, but we claim that the cow does all that and more!

The cow is a work animal as well as the horse. Moreover the cow gives milk with which to feed the children; the flesh of the cow is used for food; her horns are made into combs and such things. Then when the old cow lays down and dies, we can take her hide and stretch it over the ridge pole for a roof of your house and turn her tail up for a lightnin' rod."

Cash Kidnaper Loses Plea for Delay of Death

Slain Boy's Parents Refuse to Join in Appeal of Doomed Man.

By the Associated Press.

Tallahassee, Fla., July 7.—Franklin Pierce McCall, 21-year-old kidnaper of James B. Cash, jr., a 5-year-old youngster he had often played with, was refused respite from death today by the State pardon board.

Barring interference from an appeal to the State Supreme Court, McCall's electrocution could be carried out as early as the week of July 18. The boy was kidnaped May 29.

The pardon board, headed by Gov. Fred P. Cone, took only 13 minutes after a public hearing to deny McCall's plea to commute his death sentence to life imprisonment. McCall's 57-year-old widowed mother retained the attorney who pleaded for mercy for him.

She sat with his wife but did not address the board. Neither did Mr. and Mrs. James Bailey Cash, parents of the kidnaped child who died in the hands of his abductor. The four separated by only a few feet, sobbed throughout.

Before the board met, McCall's mother went to Mrs. Cash, shook hands and whispered a request that she join the plea for mercy for the kidnaper. They both cried and Mrs. McCall returned to her place.

"She won't help me," said Mrs. McCall through her tears. "She told me: 'Your son not only killed my son but he has figuratively killed my husband and me. No penalty can pay for the crime or relieve us of our misery.'"

On the Horizon

Gogol's celebrated play, "The Inspector General," a satire on corrupt politics in Russia in the nineteenth century, will be offered by the theater group of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, as the fourth summer festival program of the season at the National Sylvan Theater, on the Monument Grounds, next Tuesday night. The play will be preceded by a program of popular music by the Washington Gaslight Band.

"Engaged," a farcical comedy by W. S. Gilbert, of operetta fame, will be the next production by the Roadside Theater acting group, opening in the "Old Red Barn" next Monday night. Howard Wierum, Lansing Hall, Fred Haskin and other favorites will head the cast.

The Cross Roads Theater, located at Bailey's Cross Roads, in Virginia, has "The Ghost Train" in preparation to follow the current engagement of its revival of "Petticoat Fever," the season's first hit. Later on there will be a renewal of "The Old Soak."

The Wilson Line steamer City of Washington continues its regular schedule of daily sailings to Mount Vernon and its moonlight cruises down the Potomac, wtih stops at Marshall Hall. The river amusement park this season has been equipped with many new attractions, including a theater.

The S. S. Potomac, of the Potomac River Line, is serving large passenger lists these warm July nights on its moonlight excursions down the river and back. The boat leaves its wharf sufficiently early to be back at dock before midnight.

Man's Premonition Realized as 2 Sons Die in Accidents

Baltimore, July 7 (AP)—Richard Franklin, former WPA worker, who "never liked the city" because he was afraid "something would happen to the children," mourned today the deaths of two sons in accidents 48 hours apart.

The depression forced Franklin, his wife, Virginia, 27, and their eight children to move into the city to work. On July 4, an automobile struck and killed his son, Theodore, 10. Yesterday, Richard, Jr., 5, was killed in a fall from a drainpipe.
